GOVERNORS WANT MORE CONFERENCES

They Plan to Meet Regularly to Obtain Uniformity of Legislation.

TO CONSIDER DIVORCE LAWS

James J. Hill Says Wasting of Natural Resources Involves Political as Well as Economic Future.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—If there was anything lacking to demonstrate President Roosevelt's complete mastery of the conference of Governors it was supplied this morning by Gov. Glenn, the militant Executive of North Carolina, who last year was engaged in a hot contest with the Federal Government over the supremacy of State or Federal railroad laws.

Gov. Glenn made the speech of the conference, and from first to last it was an appeal for National support on a question in which North Carolina is vitally interested—the White Mountain and Appalachian forest reserve proposition. The North Carolina Governor wanted the conference to do something that would make Congress pass the pending bill right off the bat. The Governors and their advisers were with him enthusiastically, and applauded every period.

At a banquet last night Speaker Cannon had suggested that the States interested in this project should get together, and by a confederation of their own obtain the result they are aiming at, without calling for Federal assistance. Gov. Glenn took up that suggestion, and nearly raised the roof by his reply.

"We tried a confederation once down our way," he cried, "and it didn't pay."

The assembled Governors fairly whooped their appreciation of that. They fired a few hats in the air and generally let loose emphatic signs of approval.

Roosevelt Running Conference.

Mr. Roosevelt went on running the conference in his own way to-day, without let or hindrance from any of the Governors. He opened the session, and soon afterward called Gov. John Johnson to the chair, with the announcement that he had selected Gov. Deneen of Illinois to preside during his absence at the afternoon session.

The "big" speech of the morning was delivered by James J. Hill, who made a solid impression by the figures of National waste which he produced.

The Governors are getting better acquainted, the men accompanying them are finding out who's who, and the novelty of actually doing business in the White House is wearing off, so that there is a readier disposition to jump in and have one's own say on questions of special interest. Gov. Johnson has a nimble tongue, which helps out for a presiding officer. He made one sally which set the whole crowd off. It came after the close of Mr. Hill's speech.

Referring to what Mr. Hill had said about the air as a beneficial agent in agriculture, Gov. Johnson said:

"With a conference like this, which brings so many politicians together, there ought to be plenty of hot air."

Governors Favor Plans.

The Governors are greatly pleased with their conference, and are already working to make such meetings a regular thing hereafter. They are satisfied to let the President go on running this one to suit himself, but there is a growing undercurrent in favor of getting away from White House influence in subsequent meetings, and have them in fact as well as name conferences of Governors. The idea of conservation of natural resources has caught them all, and there is now an overwhelming sentiment among them in favor especially of the Administration's forestry policy. They are for the existing reserves, and more, too.

But they are also talking of the benefits that may be derived from such conferences in the way of efforts to obtain uniform legislation along other lines. Uniformity of marriage and divorce laws, with uniform extradition laws, appeal to the Governors very strongly. At the close of the official conference this afternoon there was a little informal meeting attended by about a dozen Governors, at which a committee of three, Folk of Missouri, Sheldon of Nebraska, and Wilson of Kentucky, was appointed to canvass the subject and make recommendations as to what should be done for the future. Gov. Fort has already invited the Governors to hold their conference of next year at Atlantic City, and Gov. Wilson has asked them to come to Louisville.

The afternoon session furnished a diversion when Gov. Gooding of Idaho, who is a stanch Roosevelt man on most things, tackled the Government reclamation service and hit it some hard cracks. He contended for the right of the States to do the reclamation work for themselves, under the Carey act, and declared that they did it a great deal more satisfactorily than the Government. He cited two cases in his own State to prove his contention.

On the Minidoka project, Government work, there have been 787 entries and 822 transfers, principally because the settlers could not make good under the conditions. But on the Twin Falls project, a private enterprise under the State, there have been only about 15 per cent. of transfers.

The speech of James J. Hill, head of the Directorate of the Great Northern Railway, was a notable address.

Speech of James J. Hill.

Mr. Hill spoke in part as follows, his subject being "The National Wealth of the Land and Its Conservation":

"'Of all the sinful wasters of man's inheritance on earth' said the late Prof. Shaler, 'and all are in this regard sinners, the very worst are the people of America.' This is not a popular phrase, but a scientific judgment. It is borne out by facts. If we fail to consider what we possess of wealth available for the uses of mankind, and to what extent we are wasting a National patrimony that can never be restored, we might be likened to the Directors of a company who never examine a balance sheet.

"The resources of the sea furnish less than 5 per cent. of the food supply, and that is all. The forests of this country, the product of centuries of growth, are fast disappearing. The best estimates

FEAR ITALIAN STRIKERS.

Two Hundred Armed Guards Hurried to Port Washington, L. I.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT WASHINGTON, L. I., May 14.—Some 400 Italians employed in the sand pits near here went on strike this morning because they wanted their average pay of $1.50 a day raised to $1.75. They had heard that American sand workers get all the way from $1.75 to $2.50 a day for the same work. The principal companies affected by the strike are Gallagher Brothers, the J. B. King Company, Goodwin Brothers, the Murray & Ried Company, and the Phoenix Company.

A sharp watch is kept on the strikers, for trouble has been brewing for two or three days, and an Epworth League convention was in session here to-day, most of whose members are women and children. When many of the employes of the Phoenix Company threw down their shovels, near Roslyn, their example was followed all along the line of sand workers.

Sheriff Joseph Foster was notified by telephone that the strike had begun, and that the foreign maledictions of the strikers were mixing with the hymns of the Epworth Leaguers, so close together were they. The Sheriff began pressing into service men in Mineola, East Williston, Hempstead, and all the other near-by towns and villages. The firemen formed the backbone of the company of 200 defenders. Arms were rushed to the scene from Mineola in automobiles.

It had been feared that strikers would do some damage to the sand works, in which there is much valuable machinery, and that, possibly, having once got a start, they might break up the Epworth League convention. With the appearance of armed defenders, both against fire and strikers, the Italians subsided, but did not go back to work. The defenders are on guard to-night.

CUT IN ELECTRIC LIGHT COST.

New York and Brooklyn Users to Pay 25 to 50 Per Cent. Less.

The cost of electric light in Manhattan and Brooklyn is to be reduced in a few weeks by from 25 to 50 per cent. At an inquiry into the rates and contracts of the electric light companies held yesterday by Commissioner Maltbie of the Public Service Commission it was stated by officials of the companies in these boroughs that they were about to supply their customers with lamps which would effect this reduction.

The lamps they referred to are the Tungsten and Tantalum incandescent lamps which use a metallic instead of a carbon filament. Some private users have already substituted the new lamps for the old on their own initiative, but since May 1 the Brooklyn Edison Company has been giving them to all its customers, and the New York Edison Company and the United Electric Light and Power Company have begun to issue circulars to their clientele to announce their willingness to install them.

It was explained to the Commissioner that the Tungsten and Tantalum lamps are economical through the amount of current necessary to give the illumination. The price of the current will not be altered, but as from 25 to 50 per cent. less of it will be used, the economy will be effected in this way. Thus, according to the New York Edison Company, the cost to the customer of 10,000 candle hours of illumination by a 16-candle power incandescent carbon film lamp is $3.12, by a 20-candle power Gem incandescent lamp $2.50, by a 32-candle power Tungsten lamp $1.562, and by a 25-candle power Tantalum lamp $2.125.

The 32-candle power Tungsten lamps will be offered to their customers at two-thirds of the price at which they can be bought in the open market, and the companies will send their experts to install them. They are exceedingly fragile, but are so bright that it will be advisable, say the companies, to use frosted glass shades for them.

OUT OF THE ROGUES' GALLERY.

Jackson's Widow and Daughter Needed a Picture of Him and Got It.

Mrs. Mary Jackson of Newark went with her 8-year-old daughter Mary to Police Headquarters there yesterday afternoon and sought Capt. Carroll, in command of the Detective Bureau. She asked the Captain if he would not give her the photograph which the police, she knew, had of her husband. Then the little girl took up the conversation, because for some reason Mrs. Jackson could talk no longer.

"Why, you know that picture is in the Rogues' Gallery," said Capt. Carroll.

"We know that," said the little girl.

"We might need it again," argued the Captain.

"No, you won't," answered Mary. "And we haven't any. It's the only picture of him in the whole world, Captain. You won't need it no more."

"How do you know?" asked the Captain. "Will you keep him good?"

"He's dead," said the little girl.

ESCAPED JAIL IN DEATH.

Convicted Defaulting Cashier Died When Told He Must Go to Jail.

BALTIMORE, May 14.—When he finally succeeded in effecting an entrance to the barricaded residence of John W. H. Geiger, for whose arrest and imprisonment he had an order of the United States district court, United States Marshal Langhammer to-night found Geiger dead.

Geiger was the central figure of one of the most sensational cases that has ever been tried in a Baltimore court. He had been cashier of the Canton National Bank, but resigned his position in January of last year. As a result of investigations of National Bank Examiner Hann, he was arrested on Feb. 2, 1907, and his indictment by the United States Grand Jury on 109 counts preceded his trial, which began early in the following June and lasted three weeks. Of the extensive misuse of the funds of the bank he was convicted on five of forty-seven counts.

Pending the decision of an appeal the Judge decided Geiger must begin to serve his sentence. Marshal Langhammer to-day was barred out of the Geiger residence.

Deputies were placed on guard early in the afternoon. To-night Marshal Langhammer was admitted to the lower floor and there told that Geiger was dead. He was refused permission to see the body.

Finally, however, a physician viewed the body and announced hemorrhage as the cause of death. A son of Geiger said that he had himself communicated to his father during the afternoon the news of Judge Morris's decision that the serving of the sentence must be commenced and that Geiger thereupon completely collapsed and died between 7 and 7:30 P. M. from the effects of the shock caused by the news.

2 KILLED AT CONEY BY JEALOUS SUITOR

"Kid" Twist and "Bat" Lewis Slain for Attentions to Music Hall Singer.

CROWD SEES THE SHOOTING

But Murderer Escapes—Girl in the Hospital Badly Wounded—Once Studied for Opera.

"Kid Twist," the notorious leader of the Monk Eastman gang, was shot down and killed last night as he was leaving a resort in Oceanic Walk at Coney Island and in company with a man and two women friends. The other man was also killed. The shooting was done by Louis Pogel, according to the police, who say that Pogel, known also as "Louie the Lump," was jealous of the woman in whose company the "Kid" was at the time.

"Kid Twist's" real name, according to the police, was Max Zweibach and he lived with his wife and one child at 255 Sackman Street, Williamsburg. His companion was identified later as Samuel Pietch of the same address, who was a wrestler and was known as Bat Lewis.

"Kid Twist," the police say, was a notorious crook. He assumed leadership over the Monk Eastman gang after the famous Monk was landed in Sing Sing for some "strong arm" work in Long Acre Square several years ago. Since then, say the police, the Kid had been mixed up in the killing of Dick Fitzgerald, leader of the Five Points gang, and the death of "Big Butch," a poolroom hanger on, who was killed in an east side brawl.

The deaths of "Kid Twist" and Bat Lewis were witnessed by the crowds that thronged the Bowery at Coney Island and threw the crowd in the new South Brooklyn Hotel at Oceanic Walk and the Bowery into a panic. These persons heard the reports of nine pistol shots about 8:30 o'clock, followed by the screams of a woman, and an instant later the "Kid" and Bat Lewis staggered through the swinging doors of the barroom and fell dead on the floor, beneath a huge floral horseshoe presented to the proprietor on the occasion of the opening of the hotel yesterday.

The "Kid" was wounded only once, a bullet having entered his head behind his right ear. "Bat" Lewis's body held six bullets in his left arm, groin, and hand, and in his right arm and breast as well as another behind his ear. Through the crowd which was gathering outside meanwhile fled a woman and a man, the latter, Pogel, still holding his revolver in his hand, and disappeared down the Bowery.

In the doorway of a little Italian restaurant in Oceanic Walk lay an unconscious woman. She was shot through the left shoulder. The reserves from the Coney Island Station, under Lieuts. Ned Well and Brindley, found her there and called Dr. Meeker from the Reception Hospital. Then they had the bodies of the men brought to the Coney Island Morgue.

In the hospital the woman regained consciousness and told Inspector O'Brien and Capt. Kelly that she was Carroll Terry, a singer in the Imperial Music Hall at the Bowery and Thompson's Walk. She said she did not know the men who had been killed, but had accepted their invitation to have a drink, and later to have dinner in the restaurant. She said she got Mabel Leon, another singer, to go with them.

"It was Louis Pogel who shot me," the police say the woman said, "and it was he who killed my companions. He was jealous of me. I met him three years ago, after I had come to New York from my home in St. Catherines, Ontario, to study for opera, and had finally drifted to the Bowery for lack of funds. We lived together since then until recently, when I went away to Western New York.

"I returned a week ago and got a place in the music hall. Pogel found me there, but I wouldn't have anything to do with him, and he got angry. I suppose he must have been following me to-day, for when we all left the restaurant he was standing in the doorway. He struck me with his fist and knocked me down, and then he drew the gun. He fired at the men and I saw them fall, and then he shot me."

At the hospital it was said that the Terry girl would recover. The police are looking for Mabel Leon and Pogel, who, they say, lives at 10 City Hall Place, Manhattan, and is about 29 years old.

POISONED AT A CAROUSAL.

Three Men Dead and One Other In Hospital Following a Celebration.

Joseph Mernek sailed away for his home in Hungary yesterday morning, and a dozen of his friends, including his brother Sergei, who had been to the pier to see him off, went to Sergei's home, in the basement of the tenement at 537 East Twelfth Street, to drink to the good luck of the homeward-bound man. They caroused all day long, drinking and smoking, and at 6 o'clock last night Max Gloser, who also lived in the house, became ill.

His companions got Dr. Lothian from Bellevue Hospital, and Gloser was taken there. He died a few minutes afterward. An instant later there came another call from the house, and Dr. Lothian went again, to get Joseph Konoshuk this time. Konoshuk was no more than safe in the hospital when a third call came, and Dr. Lothian found Sergei Mernek and Simon Huk writhing on the floor in agony.

Huk and Konoshuk died soon afterward. Dr. Lothian notified the police, who called officials of the Health Board. These men found two bottles in the basement, one of which contained an almost colorless liquid which the police think is wood alcohol. It will be analyzed by the Health Board.

The police believe that in their ignorance the Hungarians had either been drinking the wood alcohol clear or diluting it with water.

FRANKO COMPLAINS IN VAIN.

Policeman Who Arrested Him Upheld After Remarks on Professions.

Deputy Police Commissioner Hanson dismissed yesterday a complaint brought by Nahan Franko, the musical director, against Policeman Xenodocius of the Traffic Squad, who arrested Franko in Fifth Avenue on the day of the Catholic Centennial parade for insisting on getting through the lines. In the police court Mr. Franko paid a fine of $2 rather than apologize to the policeman for the language which the latter said he used.

"I am an American citizen," said Mr. Franko at the trial yesterday, "and I think that if I was locked in a cell I would have committed a crime. The wife of a prominent business man would testify for me were it not that her husband objects to the notoriety."

"He thought he'd have 200 witnesses marching to the station house behind him to slow music," remarked the policeman.

"You have no right to comment on my profession," responded Franko, angrily. "I would not exchange it for yours. Mine is more intellectual."

"You have lost your temper here probably in the same way that you lost it when the policeman prevented you from going through the lines," commented the Commissioner, as he rapped his gavel for order. Then he dismissed the charge.

Mr. Franko remarked as he left the court that he could not get justice anywhere.

ADMIRAL EVANS AT HOME.

He Reaches Washington in Good Condition.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, not nearly so decrepit as reports would make him, arrived in Washington to-night. He was wearied by the cramped confinement of a Pullman car, and he went to bed in his own house two hours after the arrival of his train.

Rear Admiral Cowles, the President's brother-in-law, and several other naval officers were at the station when the train came in. As Admiral Evans appeared Admiral Cowles rushed forward with outstretched hand.

"I am very, very glad to see you," he said. "You're looking like anything but an invalid. We expected to find you emaciated, and a ghost of your former self."

"Oh, I'm not dead yet by a good deal," responded Admiral Evans. "There were certain persons who seemed to have designs upon my health, if their reports are to be taken as evidence. But the reports were greatly exaggerated."

Once in the station a crowd waiting for trains recognized the Admiral and cheered him, while the women clapped their gloved hands. Aside from this, however, there was no demonstration.

The Admiral was taken to his home in an automobile.

FEARS FOR CHRISTIANITY.

Prof. Wenley Thinks Historical Research May Prove Startling.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, May 14.—Fear of the result of investigation of the historical origin of the Christian religion was the basis of a paper read this morning by Prof. R. M. Wenley of the University of Michigan before the Episcopal Congress.

"Our knowledge of the historical Jesus is most fragmentary," he said. "The New Testament teems with discrepancies. The truths of Christianity do not seem to be peculiar to it. Similar teachings are found in other and older religions. We know very little, indeed, of Jesus. The materials for a biography of Jesus do not exist.

"My own conviction is that the negative process of historical research is destined to travel even further, and it may be that when criticism comes to clarify the evidence and to reconstruct the situation from an exact historical standpoint, we shall sand aghast, stricken and helpless."

CRITICISES THE CATHOLICS.

Bishop Neely Says Their Church Meddles Unduly in Politics.

BALTIMORE, May 14.—Some rather sharp criticism of the Roman Catholic Church was made at to-day's meeting of the Methodist General Conference by Bishop Neely, who has charge of the Methodist missions in South America. He charged the Catholic Church with improper use of its influence in South America. He also accused it of mingling in the politics of this country, declaring that its influence is felt in our State and municipal Governments and at Washington.

Bishop Neely spoke encouragingly of the work of the Methodist missions in South America. He said thousands had been converted, and that a permanent Christianizing and uplifting force had been established in all the South American countries.

Another incident of the day was a blow aimed at the Field Secretaries of the Foreign Missions Society in a memorial introduced in the Committee of Foreign Missions asking that they be abolished. Motives of economy are said to have inspired the memorial.

The committee having the matter under consideration has decided to recommend to the Conference that the Board of Education, Freedmen's Aid, and Sunday Schools be divided into three distinct organizations.

EMBRACES CHILD'S RESCUER.

Mother Embarrasses a Policeman Who Saved Her Little Girl from Drowning.

Dressed in a misfit suit of borrowed clothes, and with his hair still damp from a sudden plunge in the East River, Fred Wilday did not look very much like the brave policeman that he had just proved himself to be, but Mrs. Mary McDowell of 408 East Fifty-first Street did not stop to bother about his appearance. She rushed up to him, as soon as he set foot on the dock at East Fifty-second Street yesterday afternoon, and throwing her arms around his neck, sobbingly thanked him for saving her seven-year-old daughter Mary, who had fallen into the river while playing on the stairway at the foot of East Fifty-first Street.

Ed Kelly, an attendant on the Blackwell's Island ferryboat William H. Wickham, aided Wilday in the rescue by pulling him and the girl into a rowboat.

ROBBERS GET $35,000.

Make a Raid on a Station When Pay for Miners Comes In.

EL PASO, May 14.—Pursued by men and bloodhounds, three bandits with $35,000 of loot in their possession are fleeing through the rugged mountain passes north of French, a little station eighty miles from East Las Vegas, N. M., on the Santa Fé Railroad, in an effort to escape. At French this afternoon they broke down the doors of the station, bound and gagged the station agent and special guard, blew open the safe, took the money, and rode away.

The stolen money was sent from Albuquerque this morning on Santa Fé train No. 10 to pay miners at Dawson, N. M.

CHANGES RELIGIOUS FAITH.

The Rev. Sigourney Fay Leaves Episcopal Church for Catholic Body.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—The Rev. Sigourney Fay, formerly of this city, but lately Professor of Dogmatic Theology at Nashota Seminary, Wisconsin, and Canon of Fond du Lac Cathedral, has severed his connection with the Episcopal Church.

He will join the Rev. William McGarvey, former rector of St. Elizabeth's Church there, in the movement toward the Catholic Church.

MORE TRACTION ACCIDENTS.

4,707 In Town In April Against 3,921 In February—30 Fatalities.

According to the reports compiled by the Public Service Commission, there were in April 4,707 accidents upon the street railways, subways, and elevated roads within its jurisdiction. This shows a steady increase since the beginning of the year. In January there were 3,921 accidents, in February 3,951, and in March 4,353.

The accidents specified in April were 138 car collisions, 929 persons and vehicles struck by cars, 562 persons hurt while boarding cars, and 544 while alighting. Contact with electric rails or wires accounted for 36 accidents. Altogether there were 2,896 persons hurt. Of these, 1,671 were passengers, 682 persons not passengers, and 508 employes. These figures also show an increase. Of the persons injured in April, 30 died.

AEROPLANE CRUSHED AFTER LONG FLIGHT

BEATS A MILE A MINUTE

Aeronaut Escapes with Only a Scratch—Experiments Are to be Interrupted for a Time.

Special to The New York Times.

MANTEO, N. C., May 14.—The complete wrecking to-day of the flying machine of the Wright brothers was the termination of a great flight by the machine, the longest it has made, with Wilbur Wright as navigator. The airship was hurled to the ground with terrific force, crushing like a shell.

Wilbur Wright, with his usual luck, escaped from the wreck with but an inconsequential scratch on his face. The machine, under the perfect control of the navigator, had soared over a circuitous route with the speed of a lightning express when it was wrecked. The accident was due to a mistake by the navigator. The machine was inclined downward when he intended to increase its altitude by the use of the elevation rudder. Instead of manipulating the lever so as to incline the rudder upward he inclined it downward.

The machine already on that course went to the ground with redoubled speed. It was not more than twenty feet from the surface, but the velocity at which it was going was sufficient to crush it, strongly built though it was. Just such an accident as this of to-day has been feared by the Wrights. The new steering gear of the machine, the mechanism of which was perfectly understood, and which was working to their satisfaction, was hard to manipulate instantaneously without considerable practice.

The Wrights had not had time to practice its manipulation to perfection. The flight of the machine was a marvelous one, far outdistancing other successful ones that have been recently made at Kill Devil Hill. The machine flew upward of eight miles in seven minutes and forty seconds.

Making the ascent from a point near the house in which it is sheltered, one mile from the Kill Devil life saving station, it was steered in a northerly direction parallel with the coast for a mile and a half. It was then directed westward over a small sand hill, and between two larger hills, then completely circling another sand hill.

The course of the machine was turned toward the starting point. Arriving there like a giant bird, under the perfect control of the navigator, the machine sped on, the navigator having determined to again fly over the four-mile course. The course was pursued with the same great speed until exactly half of it had been flown. Then the fatal mistake was made. Barring the accident, the flight was magnificent.

Previous to this flight another of perhaps equal importance, though shorter, was flown. This consisted in the complete circling of a big sand hill 150 feet high for a distance of two miles, Orville Wright and an assistant mechanic being seated in the machine. The machine on this circuit came back to its starting point. The wreck will be packed up and shipped back to Dayton, Ohio, the home of the Wrights.

Barring the fatal accident the flying machine of the Wrights was never handled so well as to-day. The long flight was more than twice as long as the best previous record made by the machine here.

The engine worked much better than heretofore. So thoroughly convinced were they that their machine was ready to be put to a supreme test in flying and manoeuvring that they would have tried it to-morrow or next day.

Few people have witnessed the flights of the machine owing to the refusal of the Wrights to fly it when they thought they were being observed by any other than life savers at the Kill Devil Hill station.

HAMMONDSPORT, N. Y., May 14.—Showers which had softened the track yesterday prevented to-day the intended flight of Prof. Alexander Graham Bell's aeroplane, in which the United States Government is interested and which was prematurely reported to have made an experimental flight yesterday.

Prof. Bell's machine, White Wings, is equipped with a thirty horse power motor and great sails, which spread for forty and fifty feet. In form and equipment it is not unlike the Red Wings, a machine with which Prof. Bell had considerable success.

Until the White Wings makes a successful flight, which the inventor confidently hopes will not be long distant, he will not discuss publicly the smaller details of the mechanism.

Lieut. Shelfridge of the United States Signal Corps is here, detailed by the Government to watch the progress of the experiments and report the feasibility of utilizing the aeroplane in warfare.

4 OUNCES OF HIS BRAIN GONE.

Brooklyn Man Apparently None the Worse for the Loss of It.

With four ounces of his brain removed, Jacob Ritz, 22 years old, of 1,380 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn, is preparing to leave St. Mary's Hospital, that borough, apparently in good health and in possession of all his faculties. The operation was performed by the surgeons of the hospital, and is regarded as having been entirely successful.

Ritz shot himself in the head with a revolver on April 3, the bullet entering the side of his head. A tumor formed between the brain and the wall of the skull and pressed upon the frontal lobes. In removing this it was found necessary to take out about four ounces of brain matter. Because of the course the bullet had taken it was thought that Ritz's senses of sight and taste had been impaired. Tests which were made, however, showed that these had not been affected.

INSTRUCT, SAYS BRYAN.

Fears That Otherwise the Bosses Will Control Delegates.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 14.—In The Commoner to-morrow W. J. Bryan will urge the instruction of delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

"Instructions to delegates are the order of the day," he says. "Nearly all the States which have held Democratic Conventions so far have instructed. This is as it should be; instructions are Democratic. The people speak through instructions—they cannot speak in any other way.

"A failure to instruct turns the delegates over to party bosses."

Oregon Delegates Are Instructed for Taft—Bourne Vainly Objects.

PORTLAND, Oregon, May 14.—Oregon's eight delegates to the Republican National Convention were instructed for Secretary Taft to-day at the State and Congressional District Conventions. The three conventions were absolutely in control of the Taft people, led by Senator Charles W. Fulton's friends.

After the convention had passed resolutions instructing for Taft, a message was received from Senator Bourne at Washington urging that the delegates be instructed for President Roosevelt and stating if otherwise instructed he did not wish to be a delegate.

Two efforts were made to have the name of Roosevelt substituted for that of Taft in the instructions to delegates and one to substitute the name of Hughes. Each of these motions was voted down.

YEAR'S RECORD DAY IN STOCKS

Prices Rise Sharply on Sales of More Than 1,200,000 Shares.

Yesterday was another "million share day" on the Stock Exchange, and the total of 1,205,790 shares sold, as recorded by the tape, is the record for this year. Prices went up sharply in the market leaders during the heavy trading, and at the close gains of from 1½ to 4 points were common.

The advance began with the opening of the market, and in the first few minutes of trading there had been some sharp gains in many of the low-priced stocks. Before noon, additional small advances in the railroad stocks were followed by a lull until Reading advanced under heavy trading. Later the Hill and Harriman stocks shared in the movement.

The total stocks, including American Smelting and Refining and Amalgamated, also shared in the rise.

CANDLE LIGHT IN SHERRY'S

After a Moment or Two of Darkness When an Electric Fuse Blew Out.

Sherry's was filled with diners at 7:30 o'clock last night and dinner was in full swing when suddenly an electric light fuse blew out with a pop in that vague region known as "downstairs." Every electric light in the restaurant went out at the same moment.

Of course, there wasn't exactly a panic, but there was a great commotion among the diners. Women said "Oh-h!" and waiters didn't dare move for fear of stumbling. Quickly, however, the management set to work. Candles were procured from some source, set on the tables, and lighter, and after a brief pause dinner proceeded by candlelight.

After this had lasted some eighteen minutes repairs were made to the electric circuit and the lights turned on again. The incident gave the diners something to talk about for a while.

INDIANA MINERS STRIKE.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., May 14.—Union coal miners in and around this city struck this afternoon at 4 o'clock, and all work in Indiana except in the block coal district ceased. The stoppage of work affected 16,000 miners.

The strike is in obedience to the action of the State convention of miners of Terre Haute.

TO ARREST NIGHTRIDERS.

Kentucky Troops Have Learned the Identity of 300 from Spies.

Special to The New York Times.

MAYSVILLE, Ky., May 14.—Spies have furnished to the Kentucky troops the names of more than 300 persons who are said to have been implicated in raids made on the independent tobacco planters. Soldiers, who have been scouting about Bracken County in small squads, are now mobilizing preparatory to arresting these men.

Resistance by the nightriders is feared. It is known that there have been large purchases made of arms and ammunition by men who are friendly to the cause. The troops, from their long service in the field, are in fine condition.

DOG IS HIS LEGAL PARTNER.

Real Estate Man Says the Terrier Is the Only Friend He Can Trust.

Frank M. Weiler of Weiler & Co., Newark, N. J., was arrested yesterday in that city on a body execution issued on a judgment obtained against him by Isaac Berger. The "company" part of the firm, although equally libale, was not arrested because he was burying a bone in a near-by yard and could not be found.

Tassels, Weiler's terrier, is a legal member of the firm, being duly registered with the Essex County authorities as a business partner in the real estate firm. Weiler said he was the only sort of a business associate he could trust.

Weiler was arrested in connection with a note given to Berger in payment for some painting done on houses owned by the former. Tassels signed his name to the note, through the senior member of the firm, a rubber stamp specially made for the dog being used. It is expected that before morning the other member of the firm will give himself up at the prison. He was around yesterday afternoon, looking for his partner and friend.

'SPURIOUS PAINTINGS' BRING LEGAL FIGHT

BOUGHT FROM MR. CLAUSEN

Pictures Withdrawn from the National Gallery, He Says, Were Obtained from the Art Dealer.

Within a few days much of the mystery which has surrounded the "spurious painting" case, which startled the art world when it was disclosed, will be cleared away. Last night William T. Evans named William Clausen as the picture dealer of whom he bought the two alleged Homer Martins and the alleged George Inness, which have been removed from the Corcoran Gallery in Washington.

Mr. Evans and his attorney, Frank R. Lawrence, also said that the matter would be brought into the courts within a few days and the question settled once for all whether these particular pictures were spurious, and, if so, who was to blame for their sale. At his home in Montclair, N. J., Mr. Evans made this statement last night:

"Among the first fifty paintings by American artists which formed a part of my gift to the National Gallery of Art and which, pending Congressional action for the establishment of a suitable building, are now on exhibition in the Corcoran Gallery at Washington, were two pictures, one called 'Old Mill, near St. Cloud,' the other 'Near Newport,' both bearing the name of the late Homer D. Martin, and a third picture called 'Late Afternoon at Medfield,' bearing the name of the late George Inness.

"They had been in my possession for several years and were repeatedly exhibited in public. All three are beautiful. They had received the praises of the most accomplished critics and there was no reason to doubt that they were the genuine works of the artists named.

"Rumors, however, obtained circulation a few months ago which cast such doubt upon the authenticity of the pictures that I instituted an investigation to learn their history. As a result of that investigation, I felt it incumbent upon me to recall the three pictures referred to. Fortunately I had attached to my gift the condition that I might withdraw any of the pictures which might not stand the test of time and substitute others in their place.

"The three pictures have accordingly been withdrawn from the National Gallery of Art, and are now in my possession. I have already purchased and sent to Washington in place of them two excellent examples, unquestionably genuine, of the work of the late Homer D. Martin, and the matter of a substitution of an authentic example of the work of the late George Inness for the picture attributed to him will have my attention in due season.

"Several examples of his work are with my gift to the Nation, which now amounts to sixty-nine pictures in all, and to which I am adding from time to time. The three pictures which have been withdrawn were purchased by me about 1903 from William Clausen, an art dealer, lately at 381 Fifth Avenue, but now in East Thirty-fifth Street. The subject is in the hands of my counsel, Frank R. Lawrence, for advice and action. Any steps which I may take will be purely for the purpose of eliciting the truth."

At the apartment house where Mr. Clausen lives, 200 West Seventy-ninth Street, it was said that he had left New York for the country on Tuesday. His telephone has also been removed.

Dr. Alexander C. Humphreys, President of Stevens Institute, is another collector who has been imposed upon. His attorneys are White & Otheman, 31 Nassau Street. Mr. Otheman said last night:

"We shall probably have no open suit. We have had this case for three years, and it is practically settled now."

It is understood that in that case restitution of some sort was made.

One artist, with a remarkable talent for imitating other artists' styles, is said to be responsible for all of the spurious pictures. He has been especially clever in simulating the manner of Wyant, Homer Martin, and George Inness, but he has likewise imitated successfully living painters such as J. Francis Murphy and Henry Ranger.

When the charges were first made public this artist said:

"Ever since I retouched a Martin this charge has followed me about, until now I am a ruined man. The dealer for whom I did the work has suffered similarly. My one wish is that the persons who are making these vague charges would come out and utter my name, so that I might defend myself."

It is likely that the artist's desire will be gratified to-day or to-morrow.

TO HELP CONVICT GAMBLERS.

Seven Alleged Dupes of Pittsburg Syndicate Volunteer Testimony.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., May 14.—The office of the District Attorney of Allegheny County to-night gives out the information that seven men, alleged dupes of the gambling syndicate which District Attorney Gorshing of Pittsburg and District Attorney Jerome of New York are trying to run down, have volunteered their testimony to be used in the trial of Frank T. Thompson and Frank B. Ranger, who were indicted yesterday on a charge of having conspired to rob one man through a crooked card game in New York.

It is asserted here to-day that warrants were issued for ten other members of the gambling syndicate, which is said to have robbed men of at least $1,000,000 in the last four years. To-day Thompson said:

"I admit that I have been a gambler in my time, but I have reformed, and the whole gang knows it. I am trying to conduct an honest business now, but the gambling syndicate won't let me alone. I purpose to get into this information-making business myself, and when I start gathering in the real gamblers of Pittsburg, my alleged offenses against rich men will show rather small."

The District Attorney's office here to-day announced also that it had documentary evidence that there was a regularly organized underground system of getting novices in line, and that it had already in hand a line of letters which had passed between "prompters" and "stool pigeons" as to the best methods of getting novices into the net in New York.

HOMEOPATHS TO TRY MOCCASIN POISON

Lancehead Experiment Followed by Another at Flower Hospital Clinic.

NEEDED AS A CURE, THEY SAY

Poison Extracted and Will Be Used—Gila Monster Exhibited—Doctors Dine and Rap Allopaths.

Yesterday was a gala day among the students and some of the graduates of the New York Homeopathic Medical College and Hospital. In the afternoon the commencement exercises of the college were held in Mendelssohn Hall. Following the graduation of the class of twenty-three, three clinics were held in Flower Hospital, at the conclusion of which the lancehead viper, from whose fangs recently poison was extracted for medicinal use, was exhibited, and a moccasin snake had his poison sack emptied. In the evening the Alumni had their annual dinner in the large ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria.

All of those who had attended the three special clinics in the amphitheatre of Flower Hospital—the hospital of the college—remained to see the snakes. Curator Raymond L. Dittmars of the Bronx Zoo snake house appeared upon the amphitheatre platform with the Brazilian lancehead viper securely encased in a box. Mr. Dittmars announced that as his assistant was unavoidably absent he would be unable to take out the snake and make it disgorge its poison. However, he would oblige with another snake.

After the members had examined the lancehead viper through the glass of the box top Mr. Dittmars took a moccasin out of another box. It slipped and fell to the floor. No one in the audience, which included at least one female reporter, flinched. Mr. Dittmars, with the aid of a forked stick, quickly secured the moccasin, which was at least four feet long. Then, holding its head, he worked the jaws—"milked" them—so that the virus fell into a glass receptacle.

This, it was said by some of the physicians present, later would be used for the purpose of experiment. It might be proved, they said, that the poison had some efficiency in the treatment of disease. A series of experiments with the virus of the moccasin had never been tried, they thought.

After this Mr. Dittmars exhibited a strangely shaped reptile, known as the gila monster, having some of the general attributes of the lizard. Some of those in the audience wanted Mr. Dittmars to "milk" the monster. He said that he could not, as the jaws of the reptile were so heavy that it would surely crush a glass receptacle and the poison be spilled. It was customary to use a rubber receiver, he explained.

At the commencement exercises in Mendelssohn Hall earlier in the afternoon the introductory address to the class of twenty-three was made by Dr. William Harvey King, Dean of the Faculty. The degrees were conferred by Anson R. Flower, President of the Board of Trustees. Dr. Clinton L. Bagg. President of the Medical Board of the Metropolitan Hospital, awarded the certificates.

It was announced that the first Faculty prize had been awarded to Harlan G. Farmer and the second prize to Frank C. Shipman. The prizes were microscopes. An address to the graduating class was made by the Rev. Dr. Archibald L. Love, assistant pastor of the Manhattan Congregational Church.

In the evening some 300 of the alumni and their guests attended the annual dinner of the Alumni Association. Prior to the dinner Dr. John D. Rand was elected President of the association for the coming year, Dr. Wallace B. House Treasurer, and Dr. Walter Sands Mills Secretary.

Dr. Ralph I. Lloyd was toastmaster of the dinner. There was considerable cheering when he arose to speak.

"I have never been so cordially received," said he, "excepting upon those happy occasions when the baby arrived first."

The physicians understood the joke and applause continued for some moments.

Then the toastmaster introduced Dr. William Harvey King, Dean of the College Faculty, with the hope that he might ever floress and his radio activity never grow less.

Dr. King said that there were still danger points, though the old attacks upon homeopathic teaching had died away.

"We know that this parading with the olive branch is for the sake of public opinion," said he. "Four years ago Dr. Osler in a lecture before his students in Baltimore said that homoeopaths should unite with the others, and that there was no longer a separate school of medicine. We invited him to our dinner. We did not think that he would come, but we expected that he would write a letter that we could have read at the dinner. He wrote a letter. But we didn't have it read. In that letter he practically told us we were a lot of quacks, and belonged to no scientific school. That was his opinion for us, the other his opinion for the public."

Other speakers were Dr. William T. Helmuth, Dr. Creswell McLaughlin, the Rev. George T. Dowling, Dr. John E. Wilson, and Dr. Ralph W. Thompson.

Some of those present were Dr. E. H. Porter, State Commissioner of Health; Dr. L. B. Swormstedt of Scranton, Penn.; Dr. J. B. Gregg-Curtis of Washington, D. C.; Dr. H. C. Clapp of Boston University, Dr. C. E. Lane of Poughkeepsie, a specialist in the present Thaw proceedings, and Dr. W. S. Searle, Vice President of the Board of Regents. Among the laymen were Chief John E. Wilkie of the United States Secret Service and Anson R. Flower.

reckon our standing merchantable timber at less than 2,000,000,000,000 feet. Our annual cut is about 40,000,000,000 feet. We are consuming yearly three or four times as much timber as forest growth restores. Our supply of some varieties will be practically exhausted in ten or twelve years; in the case of others, without reforesting, the present century will see the end.

Mines Can't Be Restored.

"The mine is incapable of restoration or recuperation. Upon iron and coal our industrial civilization is built.

"The exhaustion of our coal supply is not in the indefinite future. The startling feature of our coal production is not so much the magnitude of the annual output as its rate of growth. For the decade ending in 1905 the total product was 2,832,402,746 tons, which is almost exactly one-half the total product previously mined in this country. For the year 1906 the output was 414,000,000 tons, an increase of 46 per cent. on the average annual yield of the ten years preceding. In 1907 our production reached 470,000,000 tons.

"Estimates of coal deposits still remaining must necessarily be somewhat vague, but they are approximately near the mark. The best authorities do not rate them at much over 2,000,000,000,000 tons.

"The iron industry tells a similar story. The total of iron ore mined in the United States doubles about once in seven years. Our production now is over 600 pounds per capita. We do not work a mine, build a house, weave a fabric, prepare a meal, or cultivate an acre of ground under modern methods without the aid of iron. And the supply of this most precious of all the metals is so far from inexhaustible that it seems as if iron and coal might be united in their disappearance from common life.

Ores Being Exhausted.

"The most favorable view of the situation forces the conclusion that iron and coal will not be available for common use on anything like present terms before the end of this century; and our industrial, social, and political life must be readjusted to meet the strains imposed by new conditions. Yet we forbid to our consumers access to the stores of other countries, while we boast of our increased exports, of that material for want of which one day the Nation must be reduced to the last extremity.

"How are we caring for the soil and what possibilities does it hold out to the people of future support? In 1906 the total unappropriated public lands in the United States consisted of 792,000,000 acres. Of this area the divisions of Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, and Wyoming contained 195,700,000 acres of surveyed and 509,000,000 acres of unsurveyed land. We have, subtracting these totals, 50,000,000 acres of surveyed and 36,500,000 acres of unsurveyed land as our actual remaining stock. And 21,000,000 acres were disposed of in 1907. How long will the remainder last?

"Equally threatening is the change in quality. There are two ways in which the productive power of the earth is lessened—first, by erosion the sweeping away of the fertile surface into streams and thence to the sea, and, second, by exhaustion through wrong methods of cultivation. The former process has gone far.

Soil Exhaustion Most Serious.

"Far more ruinous, because universal and continuing in its effects, is the process of soil exhaustion. It is creeping over the land from east to west.

"But the fact of soil waste becomes startlingly evident when we examine the record of some States where single cropping and other agricultural abuses have been prevalent. Take the case of wheat, the mainstay of single-crop abuse. Many of us can remember when New York was the great wheat-producing State of the Union. The average yield of wheat per acre in New York for the last ten years was about 18 bushels. For the first five years of that ten-year period it was 18.4 bushels, and for the last five 17.4 bushels. In the further West, Kansas takes high rank as a wheat producer. Its average yield per acre for the last ten years was 14.16 bushels. For the first five of those years it was 15.14, and for the last five 13.18. We perceive here the working of a uniform law, independent of location, soil, or climate. It is the law of a diminishing return due to soil destruction.

"When the most fertile land in the world produces so much less than that of poorer quality elsewhere, and this low yield shows a tendency to steady decline, the situation becomes clear. We are robbing the soil in an effort to get the largest cash returns from each acre of ground in the shortest possible time and with the least possible labor."

Condemns Lack of Rotation.

Mr. Hill condemned severely the neglect to follow the principle of rotation of the crops, and the failure to use wisely selected fertilizers. He advocated the raising of cattle on the ground. Continuing, he said:

"What our people have to do is to cover less ground, cultivate smaller farms so as to make the most of them, instead of getting a scant and uncertain yield from several hundred acres, and raise productively by intelligent treatment to twice or three times its present level.

"I have dwelt upon the conservation of farm resources because of the commanding importance of this industry and because of its relation to our future. Nearly 36 per cent. of our people are engaged directly in agriculture. But all the rest depends upon it. Of our farm areas only one-half is improved. It does not produce one-half of what it could be made to yield; not by some complex system of intensive culture, but merely by ordinary care and industry intelligently applied.

"Even the unintelligent are now coming to understand that we cannot look to our foreign trade for relief from future embarrassment. Our total exports, about one-fourth in value of the products of our farms, consist to the extent of more than 70 per cent. of articles grown on the soil or directly sustained by it. We shall have less and less of this agricultural wealth to part with as population increases. And as to enlarging greatly our sale of manufactured products in the world's markets, it is mostly a dream. We cannot finally compete there, except in a few selected lines, without a material lowering of the wage scale at home and a change in the National standard of living.

"Not only the economic but the political future is involved. No people ever felt the want of work or the pinch of poverty for a long time without reaching out violent hands against their political institutions, believing that they might find in a change some relief from their distress.

"The era of unlimited expansion on every side, of having but to reach out and seize any desired good, ready provided for us by the hand that laid the foundations of the earth, is drawing to a close. The first task, it seems to me, must be to force home the facts of the situation into the public consciousness; to make men realize their duty toward coming generations exactly as the father feels it a duty to see that his children do not suffer want."

Prof. Thomas C. Chamberlain of the University of Chicago and President of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, read a paper on "Soil Wastage." He expressed the belief that contrary to a widely held theory that the earth is approaching a condition of exhaustion it will be habitable for tens of millions of years. His paper was largely technical.

R. A. Long of Kansas City was the next speaker.

Attacks Trust Legislation.

His subject was "The Conservation of the Forests." He thought that it would be difficult to get the timber owner to enter actively into the methods required for the perpetuation of the forests by spending even the minimum amount of 50 cents per thousand. But he thought the Government and the owners could arrive at some joint agreement for the saving of the forests. He said further:

"I do not think I should neglect to say that the present demoralizing conditions existing in our commercial and manufacturing life, and the consequent waste and loss incident thereto, and especially incident to the wasteful destruction of hundreds of thousands of acres of timber annually, are, in my judgment, due largely to the pernicious effect of that class of legislation which, by its application, has placed an absolute prohibition on every form of agreement looking to conservation, has placed a ban upon all meetings and discussions having for their object the adoption of the most salutary measures for the preservation of this natural resource, and has caused the instant and unfair denunciation of every meeting of the so-called "Lumber Trust," which does not, and never did, exist; has produced such a condition of mind among lumbermen that they feel that they can no longer meet together for the general discussion of matters so vitally affecting their interests and the welfare of this Nation, without subjecting themselves to the humiliation of a prosecution.

"This condition in the lumber business has led to the reduction of the wage scale of hundreds of thousands of men, affecting many millions of people, has left 20 per cent. of the timber in the forest to waste, and unless we have relief, these evils will increase and others will follow in their wake.

"Attempts at compulsory competition constitute our present commercial nightmare. Such competition is not healthy, but disastrous, and serves only, in the end, to create the most pernicious monopoly by destroying all competition—it means the survival of the strongest, and not the 'fittest.'

"Is it not sufficient for all that our resources should be conserved and saved for all generations; is it right or just that a great industry should suffer and generations to live hereafter be deprived of an adequate supply of lumber in order that a prejudice be vindicated and the consumer of to-day buy his lumber at less than cost?

"And in this connection it may be well to say that a reduction of our tariff on lumber would at once bring us into direct and disastrous competition with lumber from Canada."

The Work of New York.

J. S. Whipple, Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner of New York, enthused the conference with a brief statement of the work being done by the Empire State toward the preservation of its forest. He preceded this with the remark that within twenty-two or twenty-three years, unless preservation methods were continued, there would not be a sawing stick of timber standing in that State. He said that New York had planted more trees than all other States and the National Government combined.

Gov. Fort of New Jersey gave a very satisfactory account of the forestry work being done in his State.

The climax of the morning session was produced by Gov. Glenn of North Carolina, who made a vigorous appeal for action by the conference which would impel Congress to pass at this session a bill providing for the Appalachian and White Mountain forest preserves.

At the afternoon session Gov. Deneen of Illinois presided. Ex-Gov. Pardee of California made an address on "Resources Related to Irrigation."

DISAPPROVES OF ROOSEVELT.

Senator Bacon Thinks His Waterways Plan Is Threat to Congress.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The subject of appropriations for the Inland Waterways Commission stirred two exhibitions of anti-Roosevelt sentiment in the Senate to-day, one in committee and the other in the Chamber, when Senator Bacon saw in a paragraph in the President's speech to the Governors' conference a threat to Congress.

The first exhibition was in the Committee on Commerce, which voted to report favorably on Senator Newland's substitute bill appropriating $20,000 for continuing the commission. The committee did not like the word "continue." It refused to recognize a committee it had not created, or the creation of which it had had no opportunity to sanction. So it rebuked the President's action by ignoring the existence of his commission and appropriated the money with a grant of authority to the President to "appoint" one.

Senator Bacon, during the reading of the Sundry Civil bill, burst into action. He had discovered a paragraph in the President's speech, wherein he told the Governors that he had begged Congress thus far in vain to grant him money with which to maintain the Inland Waterways Commission, and that if Congress wouldn't furnish the funds he would find some way of getting the money without the sanction of Congress.

Senator Bacon was appalled at the boldness of this threat. No one else appeared agitated, and Senator Beveridge protested that nothing was meant. Senator Teller wound up the argument by insinuating that the speech probably was like many of the President's messages to Congress in that it was "read, disposed of, and no attention paid to it."

Sexton Who Dug 1,800 Graves Dead.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., May 14.—John Davis, the oldest church sexton in the country, was buried in Brainerd Cemetery at Cranbury this afternoon. He had been sexton of the First Presbyterian Church for forty-nine years, and had dug 1,800 graves in the cemetery in which he was laid at rest. He was 79 years old. It had been his oft-expressed hope that he be permitted to live to serve fifty years as sexton.

DENIAL THAT THAW THREATENED JEROME

Prisoner Told Dr. Lane He Bore No Malice, but Thought District Attorney Erratic.

FEARED POISON IN TOMBS

Prisoner's Case Ends Quickly—Allenist Flint, First Witness for People, Calls Thaw a Paranoiac.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 14.—The fight for the release of Harry K. Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, from the Asylum for the Criminal Insane at Matteawan, opened to-day before Justice Joseph Morschauser, with a whirlwind action that fairly took away the breaths of District Attorney Jerome, his assistant, Mr. Garvan, and the horde of reporters gathered here from New York City and other parts of the State.

Thaw's counsel, James G. Graham, confined his efforts entirely to the examination of a handful of witnesses who had seen and talked with the prisoner recently, and who declared that he acted sanely and was rational during the time he has spent in Matteawan and in the jail here.

The case for the relator in the habeas corpus proceeding was then closed abruptly, and Mr. Jerome was told to go ahead with his case. There were no opening addresses, the case being directly before the Justice without call for a jury or a commission, and with the contention of Thaw's counsel that he had been committed to the asylum by Justice Dowling in violation of the constitutional rights of the prisoner put aside for the time being.

The court proceeded promptly to take up the case of Thaw's condition of mind, and announced that it would sit, morning, afternoon, and night, with recesses of one hour for luncheon and dinner.

The original intention of hearing Thaw's side of the proceedings here and the case of the People in New York City was swept away in the rush of to-day's work in court. Mr. Jerome had no idea that Thaw's direct case would be finished within three days. But with their few witnesses, none of whom professed to be alienists, the direct case for Thaw was closed, leaving the alienists, it is believed, for the rebuttal.

Dr. McGuire Testifies for Thaw.

Dr. Frank A. McGuire, the Tombs physician, was the first witness for Thaw. He said that he had been told by a representative of the District Attorney to keep Thaw under close observation. He did this, he said, from the time of Thaw's arrival in the Tombs until his departure for Matteawan.

Dr. McGuire said that Thaw talked intelligently and without show of emotion or irritation. He thought him intelligent and his actions and words were those of a rational man, he believed. He made a report along this line.

Dr. McGuire said that on one visit he saw Thaw talking with Dr. Bingaman, his family physician. He had some paper twined between the bars of his cell. Thaw said that he had a cold and feared pneumonia. The doctor offered to have him taken to a cell below on another tier. Thaw declined, saying that the air below was foul.

Mr. Jerome took the Tombs physician on cross-examination and asked him to relate the rest of the interview with Thaw about the paper on his cell bars.

"I have covered it pretty well," was the reply.

"But you heard him say that there were people who wanted his death," said Mr. Jerome.

"No, you heard Dr. Bingham testify that he said that."

"I never said he said it."

Suspicions of Poison in His Food.

"Did not one of the orderlies report to you that Thaw was suspicious that poison was being put in his food?"

"Yes."

"And also that he was fearful of assassination and that he would be shot through a window from across the street?

"Yes."

Dr. Charles E. Lane of this city also furnished some interesting matter for the People on cross-examination. After relating his examination of Thaw, not as an expert, but as a layman with the advantage of medical training, he said that Thaw had told him that one of his friends had informed him that he was being shadowed, and that he had engaged detectives to find out who was doing the shadowing. They reported that they were unable to find anything.

"I asked him about the killing of White," the witness said, "and he told me that it was done on impulse. After a pause, he added, 'It was an irrational impulse.'

"'Were you drinking?' I asked.

"'Yes,' he answered.

"'Were you real drunk?' I asked again.

"'No,' he replied."

As with all of the other witnesses, Mr. Graham bore heavily with Dr. Lane on the matter of delusions, especially delusions of persecution.

"It has been printed that Mr. Jerome feared the release of Thaw because he thought Thaw would injure him." Mr. Graham asked: "Did Mr. Thaw say anything to you about that?"

Thaw Thought Jerome Erratic.

"He said that he didn't believe it true, that he thought Jerome was doing what he thought it was his duty to do, but he thought him erratic."

Dr. John P. Wilson of Poughkeepsie testified to visits made to Thaw in the jail here. Dr. Wilson said that he went with Dr. Lane on the first visit.

On his second visit, Dr. Wilson testified, Thaw talked of National and State matters. He said that the States should not make rules hampering the making of rates by carrying corporations. Thaw also launched into politics.

"I asked him if he did not think that the country had grown so large that Roosevelt should just simply call himself dictator, and run the Government as a centralized Government," said the witness.

"The people would never stand for that," was Thaw's reply.

Eager to Declare Thaw Sane.

Dr. Wilson was extremely eager to declare Thaw sane, calm, and finely intelligent, and insisted on expressing his opinion to that effect, although as he had not qualified as an expert he was not permitted to express such an opinion.

Thaw denied that he was insane in England, telling Dr. Wilson that he was suffering from delirium after an attack of typhoid fever.

Dr. Henry A. Parr, physician and dentist, told of visits to Thaw in the Tombs and in Matteawan. Thaw acted rationally, being calm and considerate, and even helpful, while his teeth were being fixed. During their several conversations, the witness said, Thaw talked sanely and intelligently. The impression made on him was that Thaw's acts and words were those of a rational man.

The direct case for Thaw was rested at 4:10, and Justice Morschauser gave Mr. Jerome fifteen minutes for a breathing spell before he started in. All the rest of the afternoon was spent by Mr. Jerome in getting into evidence the letters of Thaw to his old counsel, Mr. Longfellow, letters showing what Jerome has constantly alleged are paranoiacal delusions. He also got into evidence the codicil to Thaw's will, which was used in showing his insanity in his trials.

Dr. Flint Considers Thaw a Paranoiac.

Dr. Austin Flint, the alienist, was the first witness for the People. He testified to a close observation of Thaw from the time of his arrest until the end of the first trial and of his study of documents written by him, and declared that he believed him a paranoiac whose release would be a menace to the safety of the public.

"Why do you consider it unsafe to have Mr. Thaw free?" asked Mr. Graham.

"Because the actions of a paranoiac are based on their delusions, and those who have delusions of persecution or conspiracy generally take the law in their own hands and commit murder."

Dr. Flint said that Thaw's domineering attitude during his trial, his strutting into the courtroom, self-importance, and endeavor to try his own case over the heads of his counsel, were evidence of insanity that aroused his suspicions. He did not reach his conclusion that Thaw was a paranoiac until he had studied him closely and had studied the documentary evidence.

"Has he the same manner now?" asked Mr. Graham on cross-examination.

"Yes, but it is subdued."

The night session began at 7:30 o'clock with Dr. Flint still on the stand.

Thaw Becomes Nervous.

As the night session wore on Thaw began to display his old evidences of nervousness. He kept his handkerchief to his mouth the better part of the evening as if to hide the twitchings of his lips. The crowd which filled the courtroom in the morning, with many women, young and old, hung on to the very last. There was one woman with a pair of opera glasses.

Dr. Flint was kept on the stand until the hour for the adjournment. He showed under cross-examination his method of analysis of the letters to Longfellow and Anthony Comstock and the codicil of the will, and brought out very strongly his reasons for believing Thaw to be a dangerous lunatic.

At adjournment of the night session of court Thaw accidentally ran into Dr. Austin Flint, alienist for Mr. Jerome.

"Oh, doctor!" he exclaimed, "let me thank you for that nice message you sent me through Mr. Peabody."

Before Dr. Flint knew it he was shaking hands with the prisoner whom he has so frequently testified to as being a dangerous lunatic.

"Why," gasped the alienist, peering over his glasses, "I did not send you any message and have not sent you any as far as I know."

Dr. Flint said after the incident that he could not imagine how Thaw had got such an idea in his head. He said that he could not tell whether it was a sane or an insane delusion. He only knew that he had sent no message to the prisoner. Mr. Jerome did not know of the incident before adjournment, but will probably recall Dr. Flint to-day and have him testify to the fact.

The two deputies in charge of Thaw were witnesses to the incident between the alienist and the man they had in charge.

The elder Mrs. Thaw has been here for several days visiting her son at the county jail and having extended talks with him on his legal and personal plans. The long litigation has left traces upon her, but she still maintains her attitude of confidence as to the final outcome.

Present a Gold Medal to Him for Commanding the Centenary Parade.

Major Gen. Thomas H. Barry, U. S. A., commanding the Army of Cuban Pacification, who was the Grand Marshal of the Catholic centenary parade, was the guest of the Catholic Club at a banquet last night. Dr. Francis J. BULLDOG ATTACKS CHILD.

Tears Her Flesh in Many Places and She May Not Live.

Special to The New York Times.

PATERSON, N. J., May 14.—While 7-year-old Annie Heisler, daughter of Frederick Heisler of Delaware Avenue, was passing the car barns at Florida and Railroad Avenues this morning a bulldog belonging to Patrick Duffy, night watchman at the barns, sprang on her. The dog tore the child's legs, neck, face, and arms fearfully before he was beaten off.

Annie was carried to the General Hospital, where she did not regain consciousness for three hours. Her condition is critical. The child's father lodged a complaint against the owner of the dog.

DR. GOULD IS SILENT.

Refuses to Comment on Lafcadio Hearn's Criticism of Him.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 14.—Dr. George M. Gould was greatly perturbed to-day upon reading the letter to the editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES from Elwood Hendrick, concerning the Lafcadio Hearn book, written by Dr. Gould. He has a fine home at 1722 Walnut Street. His reputation personally and professionally is of the best. He is about 60 years old.

He was besieged all day by reporters from local papers and correspondents of New York papers who wished to hear his reply to Hearn's criticisms, but he declined to make any statement to-day.

42 DIE IN TORNADOES.

Property Loss in Texas, Louisiana, and Oklahoma About $1,000,000.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Tex., May 14.—The railroad situation is very bad as a result of the tornadoes of Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. All the systems entering Northern Texas cities are badly crippled, and train service much disrupted.

It will be several days before the normal situation can be restored. The revised reports received at railroad headquarters in Dallas to-day estimate the number of persons who lost their lives in Texas, Louisiana, and Oklahoma at forty-two, and the number dangerously injured to exceed 200.

The property losses of all character are approximately $1,000,000. In the vicinity of Marshall alone the loss is estimated at $100,000, the Texas & Pacific Railroad being the largest individual sufferer.

SHREVEPORT, La., May 14.—The relief train which was sent to Gilliam, La., last night, returned here to-day bearing five dead bodies and thirty-one injured victims of the tornado which passed over the northern portion of this parish yesterday.

It is believed the total will reach twenty-five dead and a hundred injured. The entire village of Gilliam was wiped out, and much damage was done at Oil City, Bleecher, and Black Bayou. A train bearing supplies, medicine, physicians, and newspaper reporters was sent to-day to the devastated section.

THE SUMMER VACATION GUIDE.

The summer vacation is the bright spot in the dull routine of the year's work. It breaks the monotony of the daily round, and cheers and invigorates for the strenuous life ahead.

America abounds with delightful summer resorts in valley, on mountain, and beside the sea. The Atlantic coast line from Labrador to Cape Hatteras contains the greatest number of resorts devoted entirely to the pursuit of pleasure and health in the world.

One may purchase from Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agents, excursion tickets to over eight hundred of these resorts, covering all the desirable places, from the rock-bound bays of Newfoundland to the gentle, sandy slopes of the Virginia beaches; from the White Mountains of New Hampshire to the Cumberland Mountains of Tennessee; in the wilds of Canada, along the shores of the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes.

The famous seacoast resorts of New Jersey—Atlantic City, Cape May, Wildwood, Ocean City, Sea Isle City, Asbury Park, Long Branch, Spring Lake, Seaside Park, Beach Haven and others, so well known that description is superfluous—are among the most popular and the most easily accessible resorts in the country.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Summer Excursion Book, to be obtained of Ticket Agents at ten cents a copy, or of the General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia, by mail postpaid for 25 cents, describes them all and gives the rates and stop-over privileges allowed on tickets.

HUMAN BONES FOUND.

Jaws May Belong to Missing Head of the Laporte Widow.

LAPORTE, Ind., May 14.—Portions of human jawbones and a piece of skin on which traces of hair are apparent, and which may prove to be a part of a human scalp, were found late to-day in the cellar of the Gunness farmhouse. With one accord the prosecuting officers of the county declare to-day that these relics are the most valuable to their case that have yet been discovered.

The bones were found by the men who have been sifting the ashes in the cellar of the house under the direction of Sheriff Smutzer. This process was inaugurated to-day as a preliminary to the mining work of Louis C. Schultz, the object being the removal of the coarser débris before the stuff was put into the sluice box.

Shortly after it was begun several large pieces of metal and a watch came rattling down the screen. The Sheriff at once ordered one of the men to sort over the larger pieces, and two pieces of human jawbones were found. The piece of skin was also found by this method.

There was a hurried call for the physicians who have been assisting the Coroner when the specimens were brought to town.

"The pieces of bone are from the upper jaw of a human being," said Dr. J. H. William Meyers. "It is impossible to determine the nature of the skin or hair; it may have come from some animal or it may have been a portion of some one's scalp."

A formal report on the bones is to be made to the Coroner by the physicians. If the doctors find conclusively that the jaws to which the fragments belong were human, the contention of the defense that there is doubt as to the identity of the adult body found after the fire will receive a hard blow. The circumstances will then tend to show that the fire had really destroyed the skull of Mrs. Gunness, thus accounting for the disappearance of the head of the corpse.

The possible determination that the globules of metal found by the mining operations on the Gunness farm yesterday were bits of gold used by a dentist for fillings in or crowns on the woman's teeth is likely to be a development of importance in the case to-day. The specimens were turned over to a local jeweler last night, and it is expected that he will report on them soon.

The authorities are being deluged with inquiries concerning missing persons, but with a few exceptions these communications are valueless because of the absence of information as to malformations, dental work, or other marks which might give a clue to the identity of the crumbling skeletons which are listed as totally unknown. Most of these remnants of humanity have been under ground for years, a circumstance which has not been taken into account by a majority of the correspondents of Sheriff Smutzer.

MINNESOTA SOLID FOR GOV. JOHNSON

Delegates Instructed to Vote for Him—Bryan Second Choice Resolution Beaten.

TARIFF IS MADE THE ISSUE

Platform Demands Control of Great Aggregations of Capital, but Recognizes Their Necessity.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 14.—Instructions to vote as a unit for Gov. John A. Johnson for the Presidency were given to the twenty-two deelgates to the Democratic National Convention by the Democratic State Convention here to-day. William J. Bryan was praised in the platform, but a motion to make him the second choice of the delegation was voted down, 772 to 166. Threats of the Bryan men to bolt were not carried out. There were cheers whenever Bryan's name was mentioned, but far more for Johnson.

Much attention is given to National affairs in the platform, which represents the views of Gov. Johnson. The chief plank demands immediate revision of the tariff, "by the friends of the people." Strict control of great corporations is advocated, but the necessity for them is recognized. Proper safeguards for the rights of labor are demanded. A plea for State rights is made.

State Senator S. D. Works was the temporary Chairman of the convention. He predicted Democratic victory with Johnson as the nominee.

The Credentials Committee was able to settle the five contests brought before it in such fashion that the Bryanites voted for the report when it was brought in. There was more trouble over the resolutions, and two reports were offered.

The majority report, which was adopted, praises Gov. Johnson's State administration, and says in part:

> We declare that the high protective tariff now maintained by the Republican Party has made possible unlawful trusts and combinations, has destroyed the equilibrium which should exist between the producing classes, and is still the chief rampart behind which predatory wealth is intrenched.
>
> We hold that while this condition remains unchanged the best efforts of prosecuting officers, courts, and juries will be ineffectual to afford permanent relief from trust domination.
>
> We therefore insist that the tariff be at once revised to meet these conditions, and that the revision be by the friends of the people rather than by the friends of the tariff.
>
> The corporate form of organization has been freely used as a cloak to hide overcapitalization, reckless speculation, and illegal business methods. Strict supervision and control of the great industrial enterprises and public service corporations is necessary for the continued welfare of the American people.
> We recognize that the commercial and transportation business of this country cannot be transacted except through the instrumentality of large aggregations of capital, but that fact makes it more than ever necessary that the rights of the individual citizen should be zealously guarded. It is not only their right so to do, but it is necessary that those who labor with their hands should organize for their own protection. The demand of labor should be granted for reasonable hours of work, for the compulsory adoption of safety appliances in connection with dangerous employments, and for a modification of the rules of the common law fixing the liability of master for injuries to the servant, so that in the future our jurisprudence will guarantee to labor that the industry will bear the risk.

The platform says "an affection for and confidence in the integrity and ability" of Bryan is maintained, but Johnson is "equally worthy and gives greater promise of successful candidacy." He is described as "a constructive statesman who holds no brief from any class, one who from early youth has been a wage-earner, whose private life has been of such purity, vigor, and earnestness as to win him the love, respect, and confidence of all who know him."

When the name of Johnson was read a terrific yell broke from the great body of delegates, and men in all parts of the hall leaped to their feet and waved their hats and handkerchiefs in wild enthusiasm.

The minority report instructed the delegates, if the nomination of Johnson became impossible, to vote for Bryan. After its defeat the platform was adopted unanimously.

The following delegates at large were chosen: W. S. Hammond, St. James; Frank A. Day, Fairmont; F. G. Winston, Minneapolis; Daniel W. Lawler, St. Paul; T. D. O'Brien, St. Paul; Martin O'Brien, Crookston, and A. C. Weiss, Duluth.

WARFIELD FOR JOHNSON.

Ex-Governor of Maryland Thinks That the South Favors Him.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, May 14.—Ex-Gov. Edwin Warfield of Maryland, who is in St. Louis on business, says a National Democratic ticket headed by Gov. Johnson of Minnesota and Gov. Folk of Missouri would sweep the country at the November elections.

"The Democrats cannot hope to win with Mr. Bryan at the head of the ticket," he said. "Mr. Bryan arouses too many antagonisms in the Democratic Party. I like Mr. Bryan very much. I think he is a great man and a great statesman, but he is not available as the Presidential candidate. I think the South is really against Mr. Bryan, and that it would like to go to Gov. Johnson."

WILLIAMS FOR HARRISON.

House Minority Leader Favors New Yorker for Vice Presidency.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—John Sharp Williams, Democratic leader in the House, came out to-day for Francis Burton Harrison for the Vice Presidency, in case the Denver Convention nominates a Western or a Southern man for first place on the ticket. Williams gave out a statement in which he declared the fact that Harrison's father was secretary to the President of the Confederacy would endear him to every Southerner, while his ability was well known in the East.

"As a member of committees," said Mr. Williams, in discussing Harrison's fitness, "Harrison has shown notably the disposition to forget that he is rich and need not work, but to do the work that presents itself to him as a member of the committees which are assigned him with all his heart and mind and strength and will. It is so rare to find a rich man who is willing to work and think that God made him to do something except fill a niche in a hall of luxury, that when one does present himself, he ought, in my opinion, to be more highly honored than the man who was forced to excel by the necessities of environment and fortune."

Friends of Harrison recently made a poll of the Democrats of the House and declare there is a strong sentiment for him as second on the Denver ticket.

Wyoming Instructs for Bryan.

CHEYENNE, Wyoming, May 14.—The Democratic State Convention to-day selected delegates to the National Convention, and instructed for William J. Bryan. Resolutions were adopted favoring the election of United States Senators by direct vote of the people, favoring an amendment to the Sherman anti-trust law excepting labor unions from the effect of its provisions, and opposing the forest reserve policy of the present National Administration.

Bryan Delegates from Bay State.

BOSTON, May 14.—Conventions in the Fifth, Sixth, and Fourteenth Massachusetts Districts to-day elected Bryan delegates to the Denver Convention.

KNOX LOSING DELEGATES.

PITTSBURG, May 14.—Pennsylvania will not send a solid Knox delegation to the Republican National Convention at Chicago. Ex-Congressman Thomas W. Phillips of New Castle, Carl Cappel of Pittsburg, who defeated George T. Oliver as a candidate for delegate, and Lewis Emery of Franklin were joined in rebellion to-day by A. M. Christie of Butler.

Christie declares that he will vote for Roosevelt, if his name comes before the convention, and if not then for the man who most closely represents Roosevelt. There are rumors of other desertions from the Knox camp.

MURPHY-METZ TALK AT LUNCHEON TABLE

Controller Says Mr. Murphy Assured Him He Didn't Intend to "Butt In" in Brooklyn.

THE LEADER NEEDS FRIENDS

Might Be in a Tight Place in City Convention if All the Disaffected Got Together—Metz Can Help.

Controller Herman A. Metz, Charles Francis Murphy, and J. Sergeant Cram lunched together at Delmonico's on Tuesday. When this news filtered out yesterday there was much speculation among the politicians about the City Hall. It was known that Mr. Cram was the host and had planned the little party for some days, but its effect on the political situation, and particularly the long-ing Tammany Hall is said to have for rule in Brooklyn, was what was eagerly discussed yesterday. The Controller was not communicative upon the matter.

It was suggested that perhaps the Tammany leader had tried to win the Controller away from Senator McCarren.

"You all know where I stand about McCarren," remarked Mr. Metz. "There's no reason why I should make my position plain every few days."

The Controller spoke of the Brooklyn Senator a few days ago as the "fairest, squarest, whitest man I have ever met." He admitted yesterday that there had been some joking at the luncheon about Tammany's attack on Brooklyn, and declared that Mr. Murphy had said he had no intention of "butting in."

In spite of this, it was the general opinion of the knowing that Mr. Murphy had not taken the trouble to arrange the luncheon with the Controller for nothing. His own power in the approaching City Convention is not so well established as to cause him no uneasiness. In Manhattan there are thirty-five districts, in Brooklyn twenty-one, in Queens four, and in Richmond one. Granting Tammany control of the great majority of Manhattan districts, it will be possible for any one who can unite the other boroughs to present such a front as to make it worth while for some of the disaffected Manhattan Democrats to turn against the organization. If five district leaders in Manhattan kicked over the traces Mr. Murphy might be in a tight place.

In this position it would be good politics to see if he could not get some of his henchmen elected in Brooklyn. Mr. Metz's influence would be most convenient, and it would be a shrewd move on Mr. Murphy's part to try to remove from the Controller's mind some of the prejudice which the treatment of McCarren at the State Convention undoubtedly created in it against Tammany and all its works.

It was hinted yesterday that possibly Mr. Murphy held out to the Controller the promise of the backing of the Manhattan organization if eighteen months hence he should wish to stand for Mayor. There are even still more important offices to which Mr. Murphy could do much to help Mr. Metz if he should aspire to them.

THOMAS SUIT SETTLED.

$50,000 Judgment to be Entered Against Him in Favor of Bank of N. America.

By a stipulation entered into when the suit brought by the National Bank of North America against E. R. Thomas to recover $50,000 with interest from Sept. 30, 1907, on a promissory note made by the defendant to the bank was called for trial yesterday before Judge Noyes in the United States Circuit Court the action was settled without trial.

The stipulation Thomas agreed to contains the provision that judgment for the amount is acknowledged, but the judgment shall not be entered before July 8 next.

E. R. Thomas's Case in Court.

Application was made to Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum yesterday by Alfred Lauterbach, counsel for E. R. Thomas, for leave to inspect additional minutes of the Grand Jury which recently indicted Thomas. Decision was reserved. Last month Mr. Lauterbach obtained an order from Justice Blanchard for an inspection of the minutes, and he asserted that the transcript of them furnished him by the District Attorney was incomplete, inasmuch as it did not include the testimony of Thomas himself.

Five-Cent Fare to the Big City's Shops.

As a result of a conference yesterday between Jersey City officials and committees from various associations of that city, Mayor Wittpenn announced yesterday that before consenting to the concessions asked by the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company, he would insist on a 5-cent fare from the Heights to the shopping district of New York on tunnel trains.

JACOB H. SCHIFF FOR TAFT.

Banker Writes a Letter of Indorsement and Joins Taft Organization.

In a letter addressed to Louis C. Hay, Chairman of the Taft organization of the State of New York, yesterday, Jacob H. Schiff, the banker, accepts office as one of the Vice Presidents of that body and comes out with an indorsement of Taft.

Associated with him on the board as Vice Presidents are Joseph H. Choate, George E. Ide, and Isaac N. Seligman of New York City; Danforth E. Ainsworth of Albany, the Rev. James E. Freeman of Yonkers, Arthur C. Hastings of Niagara Falls, Martin Heermance of Poughkeepsie, William G. Phelps of Binghamton, and Ansley Wilcox of Buffalo. Robert C. Ogden is President and William M. Barnum Treasurer.

Mr. Schiff, in accepting the Vice Presidency of the Taft organization, writes:

> I have followed for many years Mr. Taft's career—from the time of his appointment as a United States Circuit Judge—and have ever been impressed by the ability and fidelity Mr. Taft brought to the discharge of the many serious duties which high office imposed upon him. I have every conviction that with Mr. Taft in the Presidential chair naught but intelligent consideration will be given to every problem which calls for treatment at the hands of the Administration; that with a rigid insistence for due and proper regard of the law all classes of our citizens will, with Mr. Taft as President, become readily convinced that every legitimate interest will be safe in the hands of their Chief Executive.

De Lancey Kane Jay, a young Harvard graduate, lawyer, and descendant of John Jay, was elected to the Executive Committee of the Taft organization yesterday. George W. Alger of 73 Nassau Street, who was considered by President Roosevelt for an important Judgeship a year or two ago, has also accepted a place on the committee.

CLAIMS 586 FOR TAFT.

Hitchcock Counts 95 More Than a Majority in the Convention.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—At the Taft headquarters here this evening Mr. Hitchcock issued the following statement:

"State conventions in California, Montana, North Dakota, Oregon, and Washington, and five district conventions in California, two in Oregon, and one each in North Carolina, Ohio, and Texas, elected fifty-two delegates to-day, and instructed them for Taft. The total number of delegates pledged to Taft is now 574.

"Only one State Convention, that of Texas, and seven district conventions remain to be held. The Texas State Convention, to-morrow, and four of the district conventions, to be held to-morrow and the following day, will instruct for Taft, making the total number in the Taft column 586, or 95 more than a majority of the Republican National Convention."

GEORGIA DELEGATES FREE.

Most of Them, However, Are Said to Favor Taft.

MACON, Ga., May 14.—The State Republican Convention to-day elected four delegates at large to Chicago, as follows: Walter H. Johnson, Atlanta; Clark Grier, Dublin; H. L. Lincoln Johnson, colored, Columbus; Judson W. Lyons, colored, Augusta.

The delegates are uninstructed, but individually Walter H. Johnson, Grier, and H. L. Lincoln Johnson are said to favor Taft. Judson Lyons is said to favor Gov. Hughes. Twenty out of the twenty-six delegates from the State are said to be Taft supporters.

North Dakota for Taft.

MINOT, N. D., May 14.—The Republican State Convention of North Dakota today elected eight delegates to the National Convention at Chicago and instructed them to vote for Secretary Taft. The platform unqualifiedly indorses the administration of President Roosevelt, advocates the regulation of public service corporations, and condemns the administration of Gov. Burke, Democrat.

Split in Alaska; Both for Taft.

KETCHIKAN, Alaska, May 14.—Amid tumultuous scenes, the Alaskan Republican Convention split last night, with the result that contesting delegations will be sent to the National Convention at Chicago. Both conventions ratified the platform adopted at Juneau, indorsing W. H. Taft for President.

California Instructs for Taft.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., May 14.—The Republican State Convention met this afternoon and effected a temporary organization. By a vote of 351 to 275, George A. Knight, the candidate of the organization forces, was elected temporary Chairman over W. R. Davis, the nominee of the Lincoln-Roosevelt League. The entire State delegation was instructed for Taft.

Washington in Taft Column.

SPOKANE, Washington, May 14.—An unexpected feature of the Washington Republican State Convention to-day was the adoption of a local option plank by a vote of 506 to 258. The convention adopted unanimously a resolution instructing for Taft.

Split in Ohio District.

EATON, Ohio, May 14.—In the Third District here to-day rival Republican Conventions were held and two candidates were named for Congress. Both conventions have, however, instructed the delegates to the National Convention for Taft.

A TALE WITH THRILLS OF A LOST GOVERNOR

Being the Story of a Story How a Canadian Official Disappeared in Fifth Avenue.

WITH THE FACTS ADDED

A Newspaper Needlessly Had Police Ready to Search for Duncan Cameron Fraser of Nova Scotia.

Duncan Cameron Fraser, Lieutenant Governor of Nova Scotia, who stopped over in New York to attend the Canadian dinner at the Hotel Astor last night on his way to Ottawa, got back to his apartments in the Hotel St. Andrew, Broadway and Seventy-second Street, yesterday afternoon to find staring him in the face, in big black type, the startling information that he had been lost in New York between the Waldorf and Delmonico's, and that the police had been asked if they had found any man answering to his description.

Gov. Fraser was angry clear through. He has been in New York many times before and knows the city almost as well as a native. According to the story that was printed in such prominent fashion the Governor, who is over 6 feet tall and who has shoulders that would do credit to a Lieutenant of the Northwest Police, took advantage of the occasion to do a little shopping, and that innocent errand got him into the lost and unfound columns of an afternoon paper.

According to the story said to have been told to the police Gov. Fraser, accompanied by his friend B. W. Lincoln, who lives at the St. Andrew, left that hotel at 11 o'clock yesterday morning to keep an appointment with Andrew Carnegie at his residence in Fifth Avenue. That part of the story is true. Mr. Carnegie is an old friend of the Governor, and they had a pleasant little chat about the bonnie land from which they both hail.

After leaving Mr. Carnegie, Gov. Fraser and Mr. Lincoln were driven to the Waldorf-Astoria, according to the lost and unfound story. That also was true. And then, as the story went, Gov. Fraser got lost and for several hours stayed lost. Here is how he was lost:

Gov. Fraser had an engagement to take luncheon at Delmonico's with some local Canadians, the invitation to which was extended by Dr. William Ferguson of 768 East 166th Street. As that affair was not scheduled to come off until 1 o'clock the Governor told Mr. Lincoln that he had some shopping to do and would meet him later in the day.

Then, as the published story went, the Governor disappeared as if swallowed up by the earth. As the story read, the Governor's hosts were at Delmonico's waiting for him at the appointed hour, but they waited in vain. Messengers were sent to the Waldorf, to the St. Andrew, and to the department store where the Governor was supposed to be shopping but at none of those places was he found, or had any one seen him. At least, that was what the story said.

Finally, so ran the story of thrills, his friends gave the Governor up as lost and the police were asked if they had seen any one who looked like him.

The police were quoted as saying that they had no record of such a man, but offered to set the usual machinery for finding lost persons in motion if desired, and offered to send Gov. Fraser's description to every one of the eighty-two police precincts in the City of New York. The hosts of the Governor, the story explained, were loath to do this and said they would call up again later on.

Now here is the true story as told to THE TIMES by Gov. Fraser himself, when seen in his apartment at the St. Andrew, about the time that the question of sending out a general alarm for him was being debated.

"This is outrageous and is enough to keep strangers from visiting your city," he said after reading the story, "and to me it seems very extraordinary that newspapers would publish such a yarn without first trying to verify it by finding out if the person most concerned was really lost.

"In the first place I have been in New York many times before and am familiar with the city. I did have an engagement to luncheon at Delmonico's, extended in a letter to me by Dr. Ferguson. I was there on time and asked for Dr. Ferguson, for I do not know him, and the head waiter and others said they did not know him, nor did they know of the luncheon. I waited three-quarters of an hour and then lunched alone, after which I went to the Café Martin to meet other friends with whom I had an engagement.

"The only truth in the whole affair is this. I did visit Mr. Carnegie, then I made a little stop at the Waldorf, and finally went on a very innocent shopping expedition. It is cruel that a man should be thus written up, especially when that man happens to have many good friends in the city. Have I any objection to THE TIMES printing the story? Not in the least. THE TIMES came to me and found out the facts."

CANADIAN PAPER PRICES STAYED LOW

In Spite of Fact That the Cost of Labor Was as High as in United States.

PAPER MAKER TESTIFIES

He Says That Price of Pulp Has Increased About $7.50 Per Cord in Recent Years.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—John Norris of THE NEW YORK TIMES returned to the stand before the House Select Committee investigating the paper industry to-day for the purpose of submitting further evidence bearing on the question of cost of labor in the manufacture of paper. He also submitted a copy of a letter and telegram sent out by the Publishers' Association, urging newspaper publishers to respond to the committee's request for information.

The letter submitted by Mr. Norris was from Carl Riordan, general manager of the Riordan Paper Mills of Ontario. Mr. Riordan says that the cost of labor in Canada, where the paper sells at a comparatively low price, is as high as it is in this country.

When Mr. Norris submitted the letter and telegram sent out by the Publishers' Association he and Chairman Mann had a sharp altercation as to the attitude of the publishers toward the investigation. Mr. Mann said that in view of the fact that many of the questions sent out to publishers by the committee had been returned unanswered he was inclined to believe that the publishers had not been sincere in their demand that something be done to relieve them.

"No," replied Mr. Norris quickly; "but there has been a feeling among some of us ever since the first reports of the first hearings went out that the committee was not friendly to us and that the investigation would not prove friendly. It is on that ground that some of the publishers still hesitate to tell of their private business."

George C. Sherman, Treasurer of the St. Regis and Taggart's Paper Mills, and President of the Brownsville Paper Company, was the first maker of paper to be examined. Mr. Sherman stated that in recent years the price of pulp wood has increased about $7.50 a cord. The net profits of the St. Regis Company for March of this year, he said, were $6.75 or about $7 per ton of paper. During this month, he said, his company operated but four days a week, owing to the lack of orders.

Replying to a question by Mr. Mann regarding the verification of a previous statement by Mr. Norris regarding the growth of the American Paper and Pulp Association, Mr. Norris said that the confidential paper regarding the Parks pools, which he turned over to the committee, was used as the basis of the inquiry now being conducted by a New York Grand Jury, and while he had other documents on this point they could not be divulged until that investigation was ended. Regarding the American Paper and Pulp Association, Mr. Norris told of its gradual change from a social affair into the organization that it recently became.

"Did the manila and fibre association, as an association, have anything to do primarily with the production of news print paper?" asked Chairman Mann.

"Only to the extent that it tied up mills which otherwise were available for news printing making," replied Mr. Norris.

In regard to the charge that the company in 1905 borrowed $5,000,000 with which to build ten machines, and which money had been diverted to other uses, Mr. Norris said that the company had built but two machines since its creation ten years ago.

Chairman Mann had placed in the record State Department advices showing the price of paper in Canada, London, and Paris. In Ottawa, in the latter part of 1907, and thus far in 1908, the price averaged $1.90 per 100 pounds. In Montreal the price from 1902 to 1907 was from $1.99 to $2.25 per 100 pounds for large contracts and $2.10 to $2.50 for small ones. In London the price was from 2½ to 5 cents a pound, with a 5 per cent. discount. In Paris the price of paper equals a fraction over 2 cents per pound.

The committee adjourned until to-morrow.

Cruiser Maryland Wins Target Trophy.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The armored cruiser Maryland was the trophy winner in the recent record target practice at Magdalena Bay. Announcement of this was made at the Navy Department to-day. The trophy is now in the possession of the Illinois, and directions have been sent to the Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Fleet directing him to transfer it to the Maryland.

WON'T EMPLOY DRINKERS.

Frick Coke Company Takes Measures to Stop Mining Disasters.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 14.—Extreme measures to prevent future mine disasters have been taken by the H. C. Frick Coke Company, the coking division of the United States Steel Corporation. Orders have been issued providing for the dismissal of miners who become so intoxicated while off duty that they are incapacitated for work the following day. The company has also notified its employes that it will not employ miners who drink either on or off duty. This radical action is the result of numerous conferences of all Superintendents and other officials of the company.

They declare that the use of intoxicants among the miners, particularly the foreign element, has been so pronounced in recent years that they cannot afford to employ them. At such times, they allege, the men take chances that they would not take if in their nomal condition.

GOV. GARD STILL ALIVE.

Leader of Moro Outlaws, Who Wounded Him, Killed by Constabulary.

MANILA, May 14.—The announcement of the death of Gov. Allen Gard of Lanao from the effect of bolo wounds inflicted on him by Moros was false. He is expected to recover.

A detachment of the constabulary was sent in pursuit of the band of Moro outlaws commanded by Manalao Alib, members of which wounded Gov. Gard and killed Roadmaster Smith. The constables overtook the band and killed Alib.

Private E. F. Clark, who was wounded by the mad cavalryman the other day at For Stotsenburg, died to-day.

STEWART TRIAL UNLIKELY.

Committee Will Probably Not Reach Case of Banished Army Colonel.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Senator Rayner appeared to-day before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs to press his resolution calling for a court of inquiry in the case of Col. William F. Stewart, who is now isolated in an abandoned military post in Arizona by orders of the President.

The committee received from the Senator all the papers and correspondence he had. The members found that it would be necessary to get the records of the War Department before proceeding, and, as there is only one more meeting of the committee before adjournment, this practically disposes of the case for this session, for it is regarded as impossible to make a report next week.

TILLMAN TO SAIL FOR EUROPE.

Appears in Senate, Showing Severity of Illness, and Says Good-bye.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—Senator Tillman made his appearance in his seat to-day for the first time in many weeks. He shows the severity of the illness through which he has passed. He entered the Senate Chamber so quietly that it was a full minute before any of his fellow-Senators knew of his presence. Then they flocked around him.

"Don't start in to stir things up too soon," said Bacon, wagging a warning finger, "we've had comparative peace of late."

"You won't get anything out of me on this occasion," retorted Tillman, laughing. "I've come only to say good-bye."

Tillman left to-night for Boston, where he will take a steamer Saturday for Europe. His physicians believe the sea voyage will restore him to his old vigorous health. They would not allow him to remain in the country with a Presidential campaign coming on. They felt reasonably certain their patient could not be kept out of it.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, carrying more than $118,000,000, was taken up in the Senate to-day and passed.

The total of the measure was increased by the Senate over the House figures to the extent of approximately $11,500,000, the largest single item in this being $3,083,500 for public buildings and grounds.

PASS VREELAND BILL IN HOUSE, 184 TO 145

Only Fourteen Republican Insurgents Held Out Against the Party Whip.

COPY OF BILL IS LOST

Prince Makes Bitter Attack on the "Three Men Who Do the Legislating for 90,000,000 People."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The Republican insurrection against the much revised Vreeland bill petered out at the last and the bill was passed by the House this afternoon by a vote of 184 to 145. The vaunted revolt went the way of all of the other highly advertised insurrections that have preceded it in the last few years, and when it came time for the lining up there were only fourteen Republicans who did not respond to the snap of the party whip.

The Democrats voted solidly in the negative, but did not have their full strength present. The Republican insurgents were Calderhead, Cooper of Wisconsin, Daragh, Fowler, Hill, Keifer, Kuestermann, Lindbergh, McMorran, Morse, Nelson, Prince, Waldo, and Weems.

The bill, whose many amendments had already come to be considered as a standing joke, was destined not to get before the House without a still further amendment. The change yesterday whereby the notes are to bear on their face the assurance that they are secured "by bonds and other securities approved by the Secretary of the Treasury" was changed before the House convened.

As passed, the face of the new notes will say simply that the notes are secured by such bonds and securities "in accordance with law." The change was explained on the ground that as a matter of fact the Secretary of the Treasury under the bill will not see the securities in question, accepting them on the judgment of the Clearing House Association.

Joke on the Democrats.

By a clever move in the last minute of debate, the Republicans succeeded in making the final vote a joke on the Democrats. The consideration of the bill was under a special order reported by the Rules Committee in the morning, providing that a vote be taken at 5 o'clock and that one amendment might be offered, but that that amendment could only be the Currency bill introduced by John Sharp Williams at the beginning of the session.

This bill had long ago dropped from the minds of every one, and Mr. Williams himself has not tried to push it. But the Republicans insisted that it was the minority bill, and that the Democrats, if they were sincere in their oppostiion to the Vreeland measure, would certainly vote for the Williams bill.

The Democrats squirmed under this attack, but said nothing about introducing their leader's bill as an amendment to the pending measure. Finally at 4:59 o'clock Mr. Kahn of California, in the one minute at his disposal, said that for fear the Democrats would be too modest to push their own measure, he would himself offer it as an amendment.

"I want to know," said Mr. Williams, rising hurriedly, "whether this amendment is considered humorous or dilatory."

Amid hoots of laughter on the Republican side a roll call on the Williams measure was forced. There were six votes in the affirmative, 232 in the negative, and 93 answered "present." Among those answering present was Mr. Williams, the author of the bill.

Debate on the Bill.

The debate on the question occupied itself chiefly with ground that has been gone over many times already. Mr. Prince, however, one of the insurgent Republicans, who made the opening speach for the minority, made a bitter attack on the House machine, "the three men" he called them, "who do the legislating for 90,000,000 American people." He said that for one he would not go before his constituents admitting that he had been made a pawn by any three men.

Of the Republicans, Gen. Keifer, Mr. Hill, and Mr. Fowler attacked the measure, while from the Democratic side as many as could get in a word on five or ten minute allowances took a final shot at the bill. Mr. Williams referred to the bill as "an infamy," while Mr. Fowler and Mr. Hill were scarcely less bitter. Representatives Vreeland, Burton, McKinney, and Overstreet were among the defenders of the measure.

Provisions of the Bill.

The Vreeland bill provides for the organization of National Clearing House Associations, composed of ten or more National banks, estimated geographically to one in a district, which shall have the power to issue emergency currency to an aggregate amount of $500,000,000.

The currency is to be based upon "any securities, including commercial paper," which the banks may hold. Any bank may join the association of its district, but no bank may belong to more than one association. Each association is a body corporate, may sue and be sued, and is governed by a board composed of one officer of each constituent bank.

Any association member having a National bond-secured circulation outstanding to an amount equal to 40 per cent. of its capital, which has unimpaired capital and a 20 per cent. surplus, may take out the new circulation, receiving from the Treasury notes up to 75 per cent. of the cash value of the securities deposited.

The assets of all the banks in each association are jointly and severally liable for the circulation of any bank, and the Government has a first lien on them for that purpose. In general, each association is made fully responsible for each of its members.

The total circulation of any bank, National bond secured, and emergency, is limited to the amount of its unimpaired capital and surplus. Issue by any association must bear the same ratio to the $500,000,000 limit that the aggregate capital and surplus of its membership bears to the aggregate capital and surplus of all the banks in the country.

"Central reserve city" banks must maintain always on hand a gold or lawful money reserve of 25 per cent. against the new currency. Banks in reserve cities must maintain the same reserve, but may deposit half of it in central reserve city banks.

Outside "central reserve" and "reserve" cities, banks must maintain a 15 per cent. reserve, but may deposit nine-fifteenths of it in "reserve cities."

All the banks in an association are liable for the 5 per cent. redemption fund of any of its members. Redemption of the special currency is unlimited.

The special currency is taxed at 4 per cent. for the first two months, with 1 per cent. per month added for each additional month up to 10 per cent. A bank officer making a false report as to the amount of circulation out is punishable by a fine of from $1,000 to $5,000, or imprisonment from one to five years.

The bill includes provision for a special currency commission to be composed of six Senators, six Representatives, and six others appointed by the President.

Shortly before the House convened to consider the Vreeland Currency bill it was discovered that the bill itself had disappeared. Mr. Vreeland declares he dropped the bill into a basket on the Speaker's desk yesterday afternoon. There was a hurried search, but no trace of the missing measure could be found.

Members of the Conference Committee which framed the measure succeeded in getting together a duplicate copy. An automobile was called and the copy was rushed to the Government printing office after 11 o'clock. There it was printed under rush orders and the bill reached the Capitol shortly after the calling of the roll on the rule of procedure reported from the Rules Committee. An investigation will probably be made to determine whether the missing copy of the bill was stolen or lost.

FRANCO-SPANISH FIGHT.

Shots Exchanged at Casablanca—One Killed, Two Wounded.

CASABLANCA, Morocco, May 14.—There was an encounter here May 12 between some French and Spanish troops quartered in the port. The Spaniards fired first, it is alleged, and the French Zouaves replied. One Spaniard was killed and another was wounded, while the French had two men wounded. At the conclusion of the incident Col. de Smoutiers assumed command over the area reserved to Spain under the policing agreement.

The encounter took place at one of the city gates. It was the outcome of a quarrel between some Spanish soldiers and an unarmed Algerian sharpshooter. The Algerian was knocked down and beaten by the Spaniards and is now dying. A Sergeant of Zouaves, who was in charge of the gate, rushed to the rescue of the sharpshooter and, with the aid of a French subaltern, tried to intervene. The Sergeant and the officer were without arms. At this point some Spaniards, who were behind a wall, opened fire, and some of the French Zouaves returned the fire.

MADRID, May 14.—The Minister of Foreign Affairs, upon being informed of the encounter at Casablanca between French and Spanish troops, demanded details and explanations from Paris. The matter has created considerable excitement here. Some newspapers advise the immediate withdrawal of the Spanish troops, saying there is bad blood between them and the French, and that a repetition of the trouble is likely if they remain in contact.

It was later announced by both the Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Minister of War that the incident would not affect the good relations existing between France and Spain. The War Minister described the affair as "a mere drunken brawl."

PARIS, May 14.—It is declared in official circles to-day that the Casablanca incident is not expected in any way to strain the diplomatic relations between France and Spain.

McKEE DIVORCE DECREED.

Granted "In the Interests of Both Parties"—Wife to Keep the Child.

PARIS, May 14.—The McKee divorce was decreed to-day in accordance with the announcement made by the court about two weeks ago. The decree is without prejudice to either party, the formal order runing as follows:

"The court grants the divorce at the request of and in the interest of both parties."

The court was of the opinion that a reconciliation between the McKees was impossible, so a separation was the wisest thing. It found the husband guilty of violence and of having committed grave wrongs toward his wife, saying he had yielded on the slightest provocation to the impulses of his vicious nature. He had aggravated these wrongs by bringing charges against his wife which he could not prove, as well as by having read in court his wife's love letters, which "elementary decency" should have prevented him from making public.

The court found that the wife on her side unwarrantedly attacked her husband by making charges in connection with the disappearance of her jewels and other property, charges which were entirely disproved.

All financial questions pending between Mr. and Mrs. McKee were referred to the Notarial Court. The costs of the divorce action were divided evenly between the parties.

The custody of the child was given to Mrs. McKee, with the provision that Mr. McKee be allowed to have the child one month yearly, and to see the child twice a week if living in the same city or town. Mr. McKee was ordered to contribute 1,000f. monthly for the support of his child.

The court found that Mr. McKee's charges that Col. Baxter and Mrs. McKee, his daughter, had inspired libellous articles against him in the American newspapers were not proved and dismissed the case.

NEW EMPIRE FORMING.

Agreement Under Way to Readjust Relations of Denmark and Iceland.

COPENHAGEN, May 14.—The committee having the matter in hand to-day presented to King Frederick its recommendations for the regulation of the future relations between Denmark and Iceland. The committee, which is composed of members of the Danish and Icelandic Parliaments, was appointed at the time of his Majesty's visit to Iceland last year. The recommendations are embodied in a bill which, to become law, must be approved by both Parliaments. According to the provisions of the bill Iceland is to become "a free, autonomous, and independent country united to Denmark by a common King and common interests, and forming with Denmark a State federation—the United Danish Empire." If the scheme goes through King Frederick will be entitled to call himself King of Denmark and King of Iceland.

It is provided that the agreement, if it shall be made, may be revised after twenty-five years and the union partially denounced should it be impossible to reach an agreement on a new law. The arrangement providing for a common kingship, a common Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and a common system of defense cannot be denounced.

CONSULAR AGENT IN TROUBLE.

Attested Signature of Mrs. Leopold Kahn Without Requiring Her Presence

PARIS, May 14.—The American Consular Agent at Brest, A. Pitel, has become unpleasantly involved, through the attestation of a document, in a suit brought by the widow of Leopold Kahn, formerly of San Francisco, to annul a deed conveying to two of her sons certain property in San Francisco valued at $200,000.

Mr. Pitel has admitted that the attestation was made at the request of one of the sons without the presence of the mother. All the parties now reside in France.

Mrs. Kahn puts forward the claim that she signed the deed at the instigation of her sons while she was ill in Paris, and that she was under the impression that the document was a trust deed for the benefit of her six children.

MME. GOULD VISITS NICE.

She and Prince Helie Look at a Villa They May Rent Next Season.

MONTE CARLO, May 14.—Mme. Gould and Prince Helie de Sagan went to Nice to-day and inspected a villa which it is their purpose to rent next season.

They will leave for Paris to-morrow night.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

BERLIN, May 14.—The residence at Liebenberg of Prince Philip zu Eulenburg, who was arrested recently charged with perjury in connection with the Harden revelations of last Summer, was searched to-day for political correspondence. The result of the quest has not yet been made known.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 14.—Barely 15,000 out of the total of 400,000 workmen in St. Petersburg celebrated the Russian May Day to-day by refusing to work. The Employers' Association had announced that all absentees would be fined. There were no disorders in the city, and the drenching rainfall prevented open-air meetings.

PEKING, May 14.—The members of the Diplomatic Corps were received in audience to-day by the Dowager Empress at the Summer Palace.

LONDON, May 14.—The Franco-British Exhibition at Shepherd's Bush was opened to-day by the Prince of Wales.

LONDON, May 14.—An Irishman who professed to be a barrister made application to-day to the Magistrate of the Westminster Police Court for a warrant for the arrest of the Chief Secretary for Ireland "for the theft of the crown jewels from Dublin Castle." The Magistrate told the man he would have to proceed through the Public Prosecutor. The Irishman began to argue in favor of immediate action by the Magistrate, whereupon the Magistrate instructed the policemen to remove him from court.

Chicago Bookkeeper Said to Have Used the Government's Name.

CHICAGO, May 14.—An alleged "get-rich-quick" scheme has been uncovered by the Federal authorities by the arrest of Harry C. Roland, confidential bookkeeper for Tyrrall, Ward & Co. of this city, who is charged with defrauding the firm of many thousands of dollars. It is asserted by the Federal attorneys that Roland made a full confession and that his peculations involve more than $50,000.

The Mail Dealers' Protective Association is said to have been the name under which Roland carried on the operations with which he is charged. Getting the names of delinquent debtors of Tyrrall, Ward & Co., which does a mail-order business, he is said to have written to the delinquents that the Government authorities were investigating their accounts with a view to prosecuting them for using the mails to defraud. The accounts, he would say, had been turned over to the "Protective Association" for collection.

ROBBERIES IN THE NAVY YARD.

A Suspected Employe Who Was Discharged Sues Capt. Adams for $25,000.

In the last few weeks several robberies have been reported to Capt. J. D. Adams of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. All sorts of brass, steel, and iron fittings have disappeared and tools have been missed daily from the shops. The battleship New Hampshire was visited by thieves about a month ago and jewelry belonging to several of the officers was taken. Finally, a few days ago, after a bronze wheel worth several hundred dollars had been stolen, a suspected employe was questioned by Rear Admiral Goodrich and Capt. Adams, with the result that the man was summarily discharged.

Papers in a suit for $25,000 damages against Capt. Adams were served by an attorney of the discharged employe yesterday. The navy yard authorities are racking their brains for a way to put a stop to the robberies. A letter was sent to Secretary Metcalf asking for Secret Service aid. This request was promptly refused, and the navy yard officials were advised to jack up their special policemen.

JUBILEE DEDICATION FOR CITY COLLEGE

Eighty Seats of Learning Represented at the Ceremonies on St. Nicholas Heights.

BRYCE AND TWAIN THERE

Mrs. Cleveland Touches Electric Button That Rings the Tower Bell Signalizing the Dedication.

The College of the City of New York, which cost $6,500,000 and in its completed state is said to be second to none in the United States, was dedicated yesterday to the cause of higher education, free to all, under the most auspicious conditions.

The day was an ideal one for the ceremonies, at which no less than eighty colleges of this and other lands were represented in the throng that was gathered for the dedicatory exercises.

Aside from the actual dedication there were two notable features. One was the ovation with which Mark Twain was received. The other was the raising of the Stars and Stripes to the lofty flagstaff on the plaza, while the assembled company sang "America" and the silken folds of the emblem snapped in the breeze.

The exercises began at 9:15 o'clock with a reception for the speakers and distinguished guests in Townsend Harris Hall, where the academic procession was formed. It was a few minutes after 10 o'clock, while the Seventh Regiment Band played an overture, that the line, with Major Charles E. Lydecker, Marshal in Chief, at its head, moved from the north door of Harris Hall toward the plaza, where the presentation and raising of the flags of the city and of the Nation took place.

President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen, introduced by Dr. Finley, President of the college, presented the city flag.

"We of New York owe allegiance to three flags," said Mr. McGowan. "First is our allegiance to the National flag, the beautiful and inspiring Stars and Stripes; second, to the flag of this Commonwealth, the emblem of the great Empire State, the greatest and most powerful in the Union; third, the flag of this city."

Flag Flung to the Breeze.

The emblem was received by a delegation of students, who hurried with it to the tower of the auditorium, from which it was soon flung to the breeze.

Edward Lauterbach, on behalf of the Associate Alumni of the college, presented the National emblem. The flag-raising, which followed the address and formal presentation, was inspiring. With thousands grouped about the flagstaff "Old Glory" was run up and in a moment it was caught in the breeze.

As the band struck up the "Star-Spangled Banner" every hat was doffed, and cheer after cheer rang out to be echoed and re-echoed among the turreted towers of the surrounding buildings.

Mark Twain reached the grounds just before the flag-raising, and instantly recognized he was welcomed with cheers as he walked with buoyant step from the Amsterdam Avenue gate to the plaza. He wore the gown of a Doctor of Laws of Oxford, and the red and pale blue of his flowing robe and his shock of white hair would have made him a conspicuous figure in any assemblage. He joined a group of the guests and speakers consisting of Ambassador Bryce, President Eliot of Harvard University, Joseph H. Choate, Mayor McClellan, and Edward M. Shepard, President of the college trustees, all greeting him cordially.

The movement of the guests and speakers to the main hall, where the dedication exercises proper took place, proved a triumphal procession for Mark Twain. He walked with St. Clair McKelway, but all efforts to carry on a conversation with the editor were futile. Cheer after cheer rang out for the distinguished author. He smiled, waved his hand and doffed his cap to the enthusiastic throng. The undergraduates were unsparing in their welcome of the famous man of letters.

"What do you think of it?" he was asked.

"I am not a bit embarrassed," he replied.

Another reporter asked him if he didn't wish all the shouting boys could vote.

"That I don't," he said, laughing. "I am afraid they might elect me Sheriff, or to some other high office which I am not qualified to fill."

It was the City College's day, and Mark Twain's.

In the great hall those taking part in the programme were seated in the front row on the platform. Among them was Mrs. Grover Cleveland, who had a simple but interesting duty to perform in connection with the dedication. She sat between Mr. Shepard and President Finley, and was quickly recognized. She was quietly dressed in black, with just a dash of color in the form of purple trimming and a bit of lace at the throat. Her hat was trimmed with flowers and a white wing.

The exercises began with an invocation, offered by Mgr. Lavelle, followed by the formal presentation of the buildings to the Mayor of the city by Mr. Shepard. Turning to Mayor McClellan, Mr. Shepard said:

"It is the plain duty of the Trustees at this dedication to express their special sense of the obligation which the college and city owe the genius and labors of George B. Post, the architect, and of those who have labored with him here.

"We offer, Mr. Mayor, this great hall and these buildings upon St. Nicholas Heights as the result of our stewardship over the moneys and other power which the city has put into our hands. Whatever may be amiss in what we have done we are confident that here is fit provision for the present work of the President, Faculty, and instructors, who must, in truth, be the rulers of the college, and for it earn its lesser or its larger glory.

"No doubt there must in time come still larger provision, but what has thus far been done makes easy on these very heights that increase in college work which will inevitably come with the Greater and still Greater New York. Through the work of President Finley and his associates and successors may God bring the full measure of a great blessing to the City of New York, to those who dwell within its borders, and to those who are within the ever larger and larger, and, we pray, the nobler and still nobler, scope of its influence."

The Mayor's Response.

In response Mayor McClellan, turning to the undergraduates, said:

"As much has been given to you, much will be required again. You are the children of New York, who grudged you nothing, and New York has the right to expect that in her cause you will always give the best that is in you. Any one of you who forgets the example of sincerity of purpose, of honesty of thought, and of manhood given by your President, is recreant in his duty to this college. Each one of you who by right thinking and right doing lives like a manly man, not only honors Alma Mater, but does his duty to New York.

"Life's journey is not easy. The road that most of us must travel has few smooth stretches and many rough. The coward and the charlatan take the former blithely and try to pass around the latter. The manly man takes the road as it is, and finds the chief satisfaction of the journey in surmounting the obstacles he meets.

"Gentlemen of the Board of Trustees, gentlemen of the Faculty, undergraduates—I, the Mayor, in the name of the people of this city, give into your charge the trust of this new college, confident that in your hands it will be kept sacred, and that it will be administered to the greater glory of New York and to the uplifting of mankind."

A mighty cheer went up for President Finley as he arose to accept the trust imposed on him. When the applause finally subsided he said:

"I give myself hostage for these eager, noisy, ambitious young men and boys that they will bring back to the city even more than they have received. The University of Leyden gave back to the city, and to the world, her Grotius and her Descartes, a return in itself infinitely greater than the sum of all the taxes that might have been remitted. And there will spring from this college a few men who alone will compensate the city for all this new spending of her treasure. But the pledge I bring is of our unceasing striving that all who go down from this hill, this place of transfiguration, into the city shall go fitter men and better citizens."

At the close of his address President Finley said: "I am sorry ex-President Cleveland cannot be here. For the last few years he has taken a deep interest in this institution, though I believe his first affection is for Princeton, but since he cannot come himself, he has sent the one dearest to him, Mrs. Cleveland."

Every one in the room sprang to his feet when she arose and bowed repeatedly in acknowledgment of the tribute. Stepping forward until she stood beside President Finley, she pressed a button, slightly at first, and then more firmly as she gained confidence, and away up in the tower, 200 feet above where she stood, pealed the college bell, marking the actual dedication of the buildings to the cause of education. Three times she touched the button, and three times the note of the bell rang out. Inscribed on that bell is this legend:

"Unto you, O Man, I cry, and my Voice is to the sons of Man."

> The White House, Washington, D. C.
>
> I shall ask Secretary Straus to be the bearer of my message of good-will on May 14. It is an event of real and great importance, and I am glad that a member of my Cabinet, who stands peculiarly close to me, should be present on the occasion. With all good wishes, believe me sincerely yours, THEODORE ROSSEVELT.

After extending the greetings and good wishes of the President, Secretary Straus said in part:

"The vital condition for the continuance of popular Government is the education of the people. Not the education of the privileged few, but the education of the masses. The purpose of popular education should be not merely intellectual, but to turn out educated and practical workers and not impractical dreamers who, with premature and ill-guided judgments, rush to immature and hasty action. The higher and fuller we can make that education the more stable and permanent do we lay the foundations for the strengthening and development of our institutions."

Mr. Bryce Speaks.

"The American Commonwealth is better off for having Mr. Bryce in the United States," said Dr. Finley in introducting the British Ambassador. The noted diplomat, wearing a sombre cap and gown of his Alma Mater, Oxford, prefaced his more serious remarks by a sly shot at the variegated colors about him.

"When I first came to this country forty years ago," he said, "no one wore robes but the Supreme Court Justices at Washington; now look about you, and the colors rival the solar spectrum and outshine the rainbow. In fact, they almost equal the wealth of color on the ladies' hats I see in the distance." This reference to the unnumbered "Merry Widow" flower gardens evoked instant applause, and the speaker was at home with his audience.

Mr. Bryce brought greetings from Oxford, with seven centuries of history behind it, and, speaking for it and for old England, he said in closing:

"Our true life consists not in what we have, but in what we are. 'Man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.' To keep these old familiar truths before you, familiar, indeed, yet constantly forgotten, is one of the great functions of a college. In saying this I believe that I am expressing the views which you, President Finley, hold, and which are doubtless shared by the members of your staff.

"We wish you and them and the college every success in the high mission in which you are entering. That mission will grow in greatness with the growth of the city, and our hope is that the college will be more and more a centre of light and inspiration to its students and be remembered by its alumni not only for the training it has given them, but for the ideals of life it has held up before them."

Until this time, and it was well on to 2:30 o'clock, every address had been serious, with little touch of humor, save in Mr. Bryce's allusion to the "Merry Widow" hat, but ex-Ambassador Choate, who said he represented the plain citizen, brought a hearty laugh with the first word.

"I did not practice law in this city for nothing. One thing I learned," said he, "was never to talk to a hungry Judge, a hungry jury, or a hungry audience.

The hungry jurors soon the sentence sign,
And wretches hang that jurymen may dine.

"I don't want any one to hang on my words. There is an aching void that no words of mine will fill.

A Shakespearean Citizen.

"Now I am described as a citizen. I feel very much like those citizens described in the plays of Shakespeare. They are, you know, usually labeled as 'first citizen,' 'second citizen,' and so on. I am very like them, and I appear in plain clothes as well. They wear no caps and gowns, and neither you see do I. And I am like the citizen in Shakespeare, for it doesn't matter what they say, for they never say anything.

"There isn't much in the man who can live in New York for half a century, and not get all there is in him educated."

Every one settled back for a good laugh when President Finley called on Mark Twain to speak for Oxford, introducing him as the foremost figure in American letters. When he could make himself heard, the author said, in all seriousness:

"How difficult, indeed, is the higher education. Mr. Choate evidently needs a little of it. He is not only lacking as a statistician of New York, but he is off, way off, in his mathematics. 'Four thousand citizens of New York,' indeed!

"But I don't think it was wise or judicious on the part of Mr. Choate to show the kind of higher education he has obtained. He has said that seventy years ago he was in the lap of that great educator, Horace Mann. I was there at the time—and see the result, the lamentable result. May be, if he had had a sandwich here to sustain him, the result would not have been so serious."

Gov. Hughes was to have spoken, but telegraphed that he was kept away by pressing official duties. He sent his congratulations.

400 ALUMNI AT THE WALDORF.

They Sing Old Songs and Listen to the Wisdom of Mark Twain.

The "old boys" of the College of the City of New York—400 strong—representing the Associate Alumni of the institution, lustily last night drank to the long life and prosperity of their alma mater at a dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria. It was the closing feature of the day of celebration in connection with the dedication of the new buildings on St. Nicholas Heights. The alumni sang the song with a zest which revived memories of the old days, when they were enrolled as students in the buildings now vacated for the larger and more magnificent quarters which the city has built.

And when the echoes had died away, the alumni and members of the college Faculty, together with the Presidents of several other colleges in this and other States, listened to words of wisdom and wit by Mark Twain and others.

One suggestion made by Mark Twain may take root and grow, the college men say, although, when offered last night, it was partially cloaked in jest. The suggestion was that a chair of citizenship be established at City College, and the idea met with applause. Mark Twain, who was late in arriving at the dinner, was lustily cheered. Some one facetiously shouted, "Who is Mark Twain?"

Instantly came the reply from many throats:

"First in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

Before the author was called upon to speak, the other speakers had been frequently interrupted by cries of "Louder!" And on this Mark Twain commented:

"If you have a voice loud enough to state what you have to state you don't have to have anything in what you say anyhow." And then he told of the Mayor's suggestion, made in his speech at the dedication exercises in the afternoon, that citizenship should be placed above everything, even learning.

Mark Twain's Suggestion.

"I thought when the Mayor said that there was not a man within hearing who did not agree with that sentiment," added Mr. Clemons. "And then I thought—is there in any college of the land a chair of citizenship where good citizenship and all that it mplies is taught? There is not one—that is, not one where sane citizenship is taught. There are some which teach insane citizenship, bastard citizenship, but that is all. Patriotism! Yes, but patriotism is usually the refuge of the scoundrel. He is the man who talks the loudest.

"You can begin that chair of citizenship in the College of the City of New York. You can place it above mathematics and literature, and that is where it belongs.

"Some years ago on the gold coins we used to trust in God. We didn't put it on the coppers and the nickels because we were not sure. If you teach citizenship you will teach that veracity is one of the first principles of good citizenship. I think that the Congress of the United States should take it upon itself to state just what we do believe in.

"That statement on the gold coins, 'In God We Trust,' was an overstatement. There is not a nation in the world which ever put its faith in God. In the unimportant cases of life, perhaps, we do trust in God—that is, if we rule out the gamblers and burglars, and plumbers, for of course they do not believe in God.

"If cholera ever reached these shores the bulk of the Nation would pray to be delivered from the plague, but the rest of the population would put their trust in the Boards of Health. If I remember rightly, the President required or ordered the removal of that sentence from the coins. Well, I didn't see that the statement ought to remain there. It wasn't true.

"The author then told of the forty-two children in the Holy Land who were devoured by two bears, and suggested that if they put their trust in God, as they had been advised to do by the prophet, they were sadly disappointed.

He Respects the Prophets.

"But I have a great respect for the baldheaded prophets," he resumed. "I expect to be one myself sometime. I don't know Mr. Bryan, but he's got that sort of a head. If Congress puts that motto back on the coins I hope they will modify it. There are limitations. If there is not room on the coins for the limitations let them enlarge the coins.

"Now I want to tell a story about jumping at conclusions. It was told to me by Bram Stoker, and it concerns a christening. There was a little clergyman who was prone to jump at conclusions sometimes. One day he was invited to officiate at a christening. He went. There sat the relatives—intelligent-looking relatives they were. The little clergyman's instinct came to him to make a great speech. He was given to flights of oratory that way—a very dangerous thing, for often the wings which take one into the clouds of oratorical enthusiasm are wax and melt up there, and down you come.

"But the little clergyman couldn't resist. He took the child in his arms and, holding it, looked at it a moment. It wasn't much of a child. It was little, like a sweet potato. Then the little clergyman waited impressively, and then: 'I see in your countenances,' he said, 'disappointment of him. I see you are disappointed with this baby. Why? Because he is so little. My friends, if you had but the power of looking into the future you might see that great things may come of little things.

His Name Was Mary Ann.

"'There is the great ocean, holding the navies of the world, which came from little drops of water no larger than a woman's tears. There is the great constellations in the sky, made up of little bits of stars. Oh, if you could consider his future you might see that he might become the greatest poet of the universe, the greatest warrior the world has ever known, greater than Caesar, than Hannibal, than er—er (turning to the father,) what's his name?'

"The father hesitated, then whispered back, 'His name? Well , his name is Mary Ann.'"

It was nearly midnight when Mr. Clemens finished speaking. With a long cigar in his mouth he hastened from the dining hall, pausing at the door to say:

"I have an important engagement at a quarter of eleven."

It was then 11:45.

RUIN IN THE WAKE OF NOTE "BROKERS"

All of the Concerns That Dealt with the Swindlers Soon Came to Grief.

SIX MEMBERS BEHIND BARS

Chain of Evidence Leads Toward Still Others and They Are Likely to be Arrested.

When Magistrate Moss, in the Tombs Court yesterday, held Henry Hosler, member of the "brokerage" firm of Henry J. Rodman & Co. of 1 West Thirty-third Street, for examination on Monday on the charge of swindling Conrad Schweikert, a Tompkinsville (S. I.) grocer, out of the proceeds of various promissory notes, Assistant District Attorney Kindleberger and Detective Lieutenants McConville and Nelson of Police Headquarters felt that they had at least six members of the note "brokerage" gang where they would be safe for some time.

The other prisoners now awaiting hearing of their cases are John Gundlach and Regulus Shippey, believed to be two of the lesser members of the combination; Charles Barry, or Bary, a lawyer-promoter, who is thought to be one of the principals; John J. Campbell, sent away to Sing Sing last week on an old conviction, and "Major" James M. Whelpley. Hosler Barry, Gundlach, and Shippey are in the Tombs, and Whelpley is on Blackwell's Island.

From information that has come into the possession of the authorities in the last twenty-four hours, and supplemental confessions that Whelpley is making every little while, it would not be surprising if two or three other members of the gang were rounded up before long. One, Charles M. Gardner, an ex-convict, is supposed to be in Chicago, where his trail is being kept warm.

Another man is under suspicion in this city, and a Bostonian who will have to do a good deal of explaining to keep out of the toils, not to mention four or five other individuals whose past careers are none too savory and whose names have come from time to time into the history of the cases against Barry, Shippy, Whelpley, Gundlach, Hosler, and Campbell.

Another Note Victim.

This history is patched together from fragments found here and there as one or another victim shows up with his complaint. Yesterday Frederick S. Wright went to the Distict Attorney's office to charge Gundlach with the larceny of a note for $3,000 that he had obtained from one Richard S. Kaufmann in payment for services rendered.

According to Wright's complaint, Gundlach represented that he was in business and could use the note, agreeing to discount it and give $1,500 in cash and his own note for $1,700, payable when the original note matured. Wright got neither the cash nor the Gundlach note, and welcomed the opportunity to tell his troubles to the District Attorney. Magistrate Moss held Gundlach in $2,000 additional bail on the Wright complaint.

The Hosler case is particularly interesting as a connecting link between some of the present defendants and various other characters known to the police and criminal authorities. Hosler was an associate of Charles Augustus Seton and "Col." Colmey, both of whom are now serving sentences in connection with the Norfolk & Western stock swindle of a few years ago.

In his talk with Schweikert, his alleged victim, he is said to have represented that he was unable to return certain of the notes given to him by Schweikert because they had passed into the hands of a man named Jacobs. There are two men named Jacobs who figure in the case up to the present time.

One is Adolph Jacobs, a note broker, and the other is Michael Jacobs, a lawyer. According to the statements of those implicated, both appear to have handled paper that members of the gang obtained by the methods that have brought the six prisoners into the clutches of the law.

Some Weird Financing.

In connection with Hosler's association with Seton, an interesting bit of information has come out of the ivestigation of the Hopper, Morgan & Co. note case. That was a case in which E. E. Trautwin and George N. Morton got from the firm of Hopper, Morgan & Co., in which Roger Morgan, son of the late Elisha Morgan of Springfield, Mass., was a partner, $120,000 of paper on which the firm eventually went to the wall.

This Morgan paper turned up subsequently in the hands of members of the gang now under investigation, and George N. Morton has already been a caller at the District Attorney's office to tell what he knew about it. Yesterday it was learned that when Morton was negotiating with Roger Morgan for the notes, he found that the latter was tentatively in a note deal with Seton and warned him against Seton, who, Morton said, was a crook.

Magistrate Moss continued his hearing yesterday on the complaint of members of the Sherman Cutlery Company, a Keyport, N. J. concern, against Barry and Gundlach for the larceny of $108,000 of notes that caused that concern to go into a receiver's hands. The cutlery men produced a lot of correspondence in the handwriting of Gundlach, in which he frequently speaks of Barry as his attorney in the arrangement of the details of the Sherman Company's note issue. President Sherman of the cutlery company and Treasurer Hull both have testified that they met both Barry and Gundlach.

The notes that the company issued have been traced through many hands, and their attempted disposition involves most of the members of the gang thus far rounded up.

The expected examination of Barry did not take place before Commissioner Peter B. Olney, at 68 William Street, yesterday. Barry was to have been examined in bankruptcy proceedings brought against Charles H. Carpenter by Rudolph A. Breitenbach, a Maiden Lane diamond merchant, from whom Carpenter and a diamond dealer named Dreschfield obtained $182,000 worth of diamonds on a lot of notes that proved to be worthless.

A Deal in Diamonds.

Carpenter has been President of the Monarch Corporation and of the Monarch Fire Appliance Company, both of which are now bankrupt, and notes of these companies were among those given for the diamonds. Dreschfield has testified that it was Barry who introduced him to Carpenter for the purposes of the deal with Breitenbach.

Barry was produced before Mr. Olney by a keeper from the Tombs, where he is locked up on a larceny charge. His attorney, Amos Evans, asked for an adjournament of the examination until argument can be made before Judge Hough as to whether Barry should submit to examination. This argument will be heard this morning.

At the hearing before Mr. Olney Carpenter was called to the stand, and identified Barry as the man who introduced him to Dreschfield. Carpenter says he met Barry through an employe of the Monarch Fire Appliance Company named Ticer.

The testimony of Philip Schugerman, President of the Royal Bank of 95 Nassau Street, was to the effect that Carpenter and Dreschfield brought some diamonds to the bank in November, 1907, and obtained a loan of $5,500 on them, which is still unpaid. The loan was credited to the Monarch Corporation, and the resultant deposit was drawn by that company.

The deal with Breitenbach was in September, and his contention is that these were some of the diamonds that Carpenter and Dreschfield obtained from him. It has developed that other diamonds came into the possession of the Norwalk Steel and Iron Company of Norwalk, Ohio, whose notes figured in the deal with Breitenbach. Carpenter says he advanced funds to the Norwalk Company, as a result of which its notes were turned over to him. Samuel Oppenheim, attorney for Breitenbach, is anxious to find out whether the "funds" consisted of the diamonds on which his client stands loser.

WANTS RIVAL DEPORTED.

Italian Tells Ellis Island Authorities His Countryman Is a Criminal.

A section of New York's skyline seen from the barred window of the detention room on Ellis Island is probably the last view of America that Francisco Ruffino will see before the immigration officials hustle him on board the steamer on which he is to return to Italy. Yesterday Francisco was taken before the Board of Special Inquiry. The past has risen up to confront him, and so he will, in all probability, have to go back to his native land, and this when he felt he had obtained a retreat in Thompsonville, Conn.

Francisco is one of the fruits of the campaign that Detective Petrisono and his men are making to rid this country of the alian criminal. They took Francisco to Ellis Island on Wednesday, having "picked him up," a phrase which covers an alleged betrayal by a countryman because of a woman with whom both were in love.

The detectives charge that Francisco is a very undesirable alien, and that he has a criminal record of some length. He came here on the steamer Madonna from Naples, landing in New York on Dec. 31, 1907. Yesterday when the man was arraigned before the Board of Special Inquiry three detectives were on hand to present his alleged record of wrongdoing to the authorities. They allege that he has been charged with counterfeiting, burglary, and assaulting another man with a revolver. Fortunately the other man did not die or Francisco might not have been here to fall in love with a dark-eyed girl, the sweetheart of another man.

Francisco heard the record read, and then he grew voluble, and with much wealth of gesture he indignantly denied that he was either a counterfeiter or a robber. He was a man, and not a brigand. The Chairman of the board wanted some facts regarding his life before coming here. He protested his honesty. As to the charge that he had pulled a revolver on another man, well, what would they do? He had protected himself, and, after all, that was a private affair, one between man and man.

His admissions will be taken as proof that he is not a desirable citizen, and the board will probably recommend to Washington that Francisco be deported on the first ship of the line that brought him here, and sailing from this port.

It is said that the man's record became known to the police because of jealousy. A countryman who believed that Francisco might become a successful rival for a woman's affections told Detective Petrisino that the man had a criminal record, and where he might be found.

FIRE UNDERWRITERS MEET.

1907 Losses Nearly $200,000,000, but Profits Good—High Building Limits.

The address of President George T. Burchell of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, which held its forty-second annual meeting in the Mutual Life Insurance Company Building yesterday, showed that $199,383,300 was lost by fire in 1907, twenty-five fires alone having caused more than $12,000,000 damage, and two having each destroyed more than $1,000,000 worth of property. Despite this President Burchell's report showed that the underwriting profit for the year was 11.14 per cent. of the premiums.

President Burchell advocated more fire inspections and better structural work in buildings.

The report of the Committee on Incendiarism and Arson showed that these crimes were not decreasing in number. Charles G. Smith of the Committee on Construction of Buildings suggested that the efficiency of the Fire Department and the adequacy of the water supply should be considered in limiting the height of buildings and their area. He said:

"No Fire Department should be depended upon to successfully cope with a fire of serious proportions at a height beyond 65 to 75 feet, and a fire in any building having an unbroken floor area greater than 5,000 to 7,500 square feet is likely to be difficult for firemen to control."

Neither Commissioner Hayes nor Chief Croker would reply yesterday to the charge of the underwriters that there were about 38 per cent. third and fourth class men in the congested districts of Manhattan south of Fifty-ninth Street, and that only 15 per cent. of first-class men were prepared to handle fires there. Thirty new men went out to companies yesterday, about half of them going to Brooklyn.

LEPER SAILS IN SECRET.

A Solitary Passenger About Whom Great Precautions Are Hedged.

The young Russian woman, Bertha Ossis, who is being sent out of the country because she is a leper, sailed yesterday on the Scandinavian-American liner Hellig Olav. Her presence on board was unknown to the 1,100 steerage passengers. The girl occupied an isolated cabin on the upper deck aft. She will be in the care of Miss Inga Hennig, a trained nurse, and Dr. Christiansen, the ship's surgeon. She will be fed in her room and after each meal the dishes will be thrown overboard. She will be allowed to promenade the aft part of the deck at night only. The towels, bedding, and furnishings of her room will be thrown overboard at the end of the voyage.

RESCUE SONS FROM JAIL.

New York Women Pay Fines of Supposed Harvard Students.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 14.—Two New York women called at the county jail to-day, paid the fines of their sons, known to the police as Frank S. Horn and James E. Potter, and took them away in automobiles. The boys, who are said to be Harvard students, were taken from a freight train yesterday. They had no money to pay their fines. The names and addresses of the women were kept secret.

Judge Mathewson believes that the boys were beating their way from their New York homes back to Cambridge for a lark.

Cocaine Dealer Convicted.

Edward Santagata, a druggist at 71 Mott Street, who is credited with selling cocaine to many women of Chinatown, was convicted yesterday before Judge Malone in the Court of General Sessions of selling the drug without physicians' prescriptions. It is the first conviction of the kind under the new law.

The chief witness against Santagata was Arthur Haywood of 7 Pell Street. He was found on March 21 with several bottles of cocaine by Policeman Kiernan of the Sixth Precinct. Haywood said he got the cocaine from Santagata.

SLEUTH WOOED HER INTO A TOMBS CELL

Courted Mrs. Mellen's Ex-Housekeeper to Find Out if She Was a Thief.

A FATEFUL AUTOMOBILE RIDE

At the Detective's Bidding She Looked Her Best—in a Gown That Had Been Stolen.

Mrs. William L. Mellen, wife of a Pittsburg glass manufacturer, has recovered some of her wardrobe which was stolen last March. At least she has identified at the District Attorney's office a part of the contents of a trunk and various handbags which were seized by detectives when they arrested at the Hotel Martha Washington yesterday Mrs. Louisa Thelgen, Mrs. Mellen's former housekeeper.

The real detective work of the case was done by a smooth-faced young Pittsburger, Minta L. West, who doesn't care to say too much. For it was through his courtship of Mrs. Thelgen and his request to her to "put on her best frock for an automobile ride" that the housekeeper appeared in a gown afterward identified by Mrs. Mellen as her property. The housekeeper was held in the Tombs Court in $1,500 bail for further examination today.

Mrs. Thelgen was with the Mellens as housekeeper for three years prior to the middle of last Winter. Then she left in a dudgeon vowing that she would "get even." On March 5 last the Mellen residence in Forbes Street, Pittsburg, was entered and robbed. The principal things taken were articles from Mrs. Mellen's wardrobe and a few jewels. The Mellens employed private detectives and the movements of all who had been in the house were traced.

Detective West learned that the housekeeper was with friends in this city. He came on here and found Mrs. Thelgen in Fifty-seventh Street. He managed to make her acquaintance and paid her attentions with a view to obtaining her confidence and finding out whether she had any of the stolen goods. At first the woman distrusted him. She finally asked West pointblank why he was courting her.

"You look like a boy," she said, "and any one can see that I am 39."

West put on an innocent expression.

"Thirty-nine, nothing!" said he. "I don't believe it. You're kidding."

That won the ex-housekeeper on the spot. As their acquaintance progressed West would say:

"Now put on your best dress and we'll go to the theatre."

But the dresses that Mrs. Thelgen wore he couldn't identify from the descriptions furnished him. Finally he hit upon a brilliant expedient. One day he drove up to the Martha Washington, to which Mrs. Thelgen had removed, with an automobile. Mrs. Thelgen, delighted, came down in a blue gown dotted with black. The detective thought this answered the description of one of the stolen dresses. He drove out through the Bronx. On the way was what appeared to be a traveling photographer, who grinned at West behind his companion's back.

"This has been a delightful day," suggested West's companion.

"It has," said West. "Let's have that photographer take our pictures."

The woman looked at West for a moment, but whatever suspicion she might have felt at first vanished.

"The very thing," she said.

The photographer took the picture and the pair drove on. The picture made by the man employed by West, however, was sent to Pittsburg, where Mrs. Mellen thought she recognized in the dress West's companion was wearing one of those stolen in March. Mr. and Mrs. Mellen came here and went to the Hotel Plaza.

Detectives Rayens and Flood of the District Attorney's office went to the Martha Washington yesterday with West, who pointed out his companion of the auto ride. She was arrested on a warrant that had been issued by Magistrate Moss, charging her with having brought stolen goods into the State.

Mrs. Thelgen denied that she had stolen any of the things found in her trunk and bags. In the fingers of a glove in a little bag the detectives found three pearl rings. Mr. Mellen was sure that one of the pearls had been taken from a cuff button belonging to him. Mrs. Mellen identified fifteen or twenty articles of attire as her own.

The detectives said that a bank book showed that shortly after the robbery in Pittsburg the ex-housekeeper had deposited $400 in a bank here. She was about to go to Europe when she was arrested.

Asks Court to Confirm $2,100,000 Assessment on Ex-Senator's House.

Application was made by Assistant Corporation Counsel W. H. King to Supreme Court Justice O'Gorman yesterday to confirm the report of ex-Justice Abraham R. Lawrence, as referee, affirming the assessment of $2,100,000 levied in 1905 on the property at Seventy-seventh Street and Fifth Avenue, where ex-United States Senator W. A. Clark is building a residence. Decision was reserved.

Mr. Clark, through his attorneys, Atwater & Cruikshank, objected to the assessment on the ground that until the building was completed it should not be assessed at its full value. He thought the assessment ought to be reduced by one-half. The proceedings were brought in the nature of a test case, and if the decision is against him Mr. Clark intends going to the highest court.

Work on the residence was begun eight years ago, and another two years will be required to finish it. Up to the present it has cost over $3,000,000. Mr. Clark has not gone outside of this country for a single thing in its construction.

This year the property has been assessed at $3,000,000.

OLD GRADS AT GOLF PLAY.

Mabon of Rutgers Leads Big Field in University Club Tournament.

Old-time collegians took possession of the St. Andrew's Golf Club links yesterday, near Chauncey, Westchester County, and competed for golf prizes with all the ardor which characterized their interest in sports in undergraduate days. The event that brought out this aggregation of old boys was the annual tournament given under the auspices of the University Club. The contest was at 36 holes, medal play, and three net score prizes were awarded. S. C. Mabon, a Rutgers alumnus, lead the field, with a card of 173, 20, 153. A. H. Lockett, a Harvard man, was second, with 155 net, and a Yale golfer captured the third prize, E. H. Hart, with 150. John Reid, Jr., made the best gross score, 162. George T. Brokaw, who was rated at plus 2, needed 171. The players and scores:

WOMEN ON THE LINKS.

Mrs. Callan and Miss Bishop Victors in Open Golf at Englewood.

Mrs. L. A. Callan and Miss Georgianna Bishop, the ex-National champion, were the victors yesterday in the open golf tournament for the members of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, played on the links of the Englewood Golf Club. It was the second one-day open event of this character this season. The high wind prevented low scoring, and in view of this Mrs. Callan's 98 was an exceptionally brilliant performance over the long 18-hole course. She had a handicap of 4, but her gross score was decidedly the best of the day, and was the only one turned in under 100. Mrs. S. S. Lefferts, one of the scratch contestants, did 102. Miss Bishop needed 110. The latter, however, did better in the 18-hole putting match, winning this contest by a total of 46, while Miss Julia R. Mix was second, with 47. The results:

RINGER AT HORSE SHOW.

Hazel Delmar, Winner of Cup at Speedway Parade, Was Over Age.

George P. Baisley must return the Cosden Cup, which his chestnut trotting mare, Hazel Delmar, won at the Horse Show held in connection with the Speedway Parade on May 2. The event was for three-year-olds and under, trotters to wagon, and was the feature of the show. Eleven horses were shown in the ring and the judges selected Baisley's Hazel Delmar as the winner. The mare, which is a daughter of Delmar, 2:16¼, sire of Major Delmar, 2:01¼, and the former Speedway trotter, Hazel, 2:20¾, was considered the best type of a three-year-old trotting filly seen on the Speedway in years, and the award met with general approval.

Later developments showed that Hazel Delmar was really a ringer, as she was a four-year-old, and not eligible to compete under the conditions. Mr. Baisley was requested to explain the alleged illegal entry by the Road Drivers' Association. He stated that as Hazel Delmar was foaled on May 29, 1904, she would not be four years old until May 29, 1908, and consequently was eligible for the class.

This explanation did not satisfy the Horse Show Committee, as ages of all horses, both trotting and running, are counted from the 1st of every January. This is one of the stringent rules of the trotting turf, and as an owner and breeder of trotting horses, the Horse Show Committee contended that Mr. Baisley was familiar with the law and disqualified Hazel Delmar, awarding the cup to H. A. Thompson's b. m. Amarynthus, which was originally placed second. A demand has been made on Mr. Baisley for the cup, but no reply has been received to it up to the present. The committee will give Mr. Baisley a reasonable time to return the trophy before taking any legal action.

The New York Yankees and the folks that were the nobby fur-lined ulsterettes were the winners yesterday afternoon at American League Park. Anybody that wasn't fitted up with an all-wool combination suit and a side-pocket hold-out of the stuff Dr. Wiley is analyzing was distinctly not in the picture. It was cold. The iced-drinks man made an assignment, and the Wednesday genius who peddled the palm leaves took a discreet leaf out of valor's book and got outside the inclosure before he was recognized and feeling had a chance to run high.

After the 5,000 spectators had cordially abused the weather and their own idiocy in appearing without waistcoats just because they had something fancy in Spring shirting they settled down to figure how many pitchers it would take to see Cleveland through nine innings. This is always an engaging study, requiring much tabulation, percentaging, and averaging—except when the giant Joss is pitching. Then everything becomes simple.

The wise old puzzlists who agreed on two as the answer are entitled to the proper recognition. Thielman was carded to toss for Cleveland, and Chesbro for New York. Thielman lasted the whole of one inning, and that inning was the first. Everybody said it was very thoughtful of him to stick it out. Only seven Yankees came to bat in this inning, and not one of them hit the ball delivered by Pitcher Thielman, except Niles and Keeler and Hemphill and Chase and Stahl and Ball. Conroy, indeed, might have hit the ball had he been standing anywhere else save at the plate. But we must not blame Conroy, for, according the rules, the plate is where he should stand. So his base on balls is all right.

Not all of those who found Mr. Thielman parleyed the acquaintance into runs. It may be as well to give a somewhat detailed description of that first inning and then bid neighbor Thielman adieu. Niles, the first in war, hit clean to right field, and then came Keeler, whose rap forced Niles out. Hemphill singled neatly and stole second. Our reliable friend from first base—the south-pawed Chase, no less—hit to left, scoring Keeler and Hemphill. Stahl likewise found the ball, but his was a fly, and the fly perished. Conroy walked, and Ball, who will be remembered from the day before, hit safely, scoring Chase. Ball danced off first too far past the danger line and was fittingly rebuked. But there were three runs in, and all except two Highlanders had been to bat.

Cleveland squeezed in a run in the third, but there wasn't anything very brilliant or unusual about it, and it's not going to be dilated upon in these annals. Let us speak rather of the unimproved, even unembraced, opportunities of the second and ninth innings. In both of these the busy Mr. Ball, as shortstop for the New York forces, acted as a material deterrent to Ohio hopes. Considering the second inning first—

Birmingham, for Cleveland, is out at first. Hinchman, for Cleveland, is out at first, owing to the timely throw of Ball to Chase. It is looking very like a one-two-three performance. But Chesbro bangs Hickman with the ball and the former Giant walks. That's one man on base. Perring singles and Hickman moves. Two men on bases. Thielman is through. He never comes to bat at all. Turner bats for him. Turner sends the ball out in the general direction of Ball's territory, which is anywhere between the grand stand and the gate. Ball gets it all right, and would throw to second, the nearest point to force a Clevelander, but there is nobody on second to accept the throw. That is, no New Yorker. Three men on bases. Chesbro, the genius of the spit ball, licks the sphere as an old cat does her kittens, and then goes after J. Clarke, supposedly the Cleveland's ablest hitter, for he leads their list. J. Clarke strikes out. There must be something in this spit ball after all.

The ninth inning also offered a chance which the visitors did not take. Perring struck out, and then came Nill. This was Nill's positively sole appearance of the day. It was Berger's turn to bat, but Berger had relieved Thielman in the box after the first inning, and not a run had been gained off him. So Berger was considered to have completed his share of the entertainment, and Nill swung the stick. Niles fumbled and Nill made first. J. Clarke—he was the Cleveland Clarke who stayed in the game, the other one, N. Clarke, retiring as catcher about the time of Thielman's eclipse—hit to right, and again there were two on bases, with only one out, and things might very well look serious. Stovall pounded the ball over somewhere near second, and Ball, who was determined to catch anything that didn't land in the Hudson, sprang after it, and almost turned a somersault in his efforts to make a stop. He annexed it with his left hand, being himself in a physical position that virtually beggars description, as we used to say, and made a left-hand throw to second, putting out Clarke. Then Lajoie forced Stovall, and it was all over.

The spectators applauded constantly. Explanation—to applaud constantly you have to keep your hands in motion. If you keep your hands in motion, it is very seldom you freeze to death.

Paret Easily Defeats Touchard.

Jehiel P. Paret outplayed Gustave F. Touchard in their match for the final round of the singles in the Harlem Lawn Tennis Club open tournament yesterday. The result was a more complete upset of calculations than the defeat of Palmer on the previous day. The skill of Paret in forcing Touchard to play in his weakest positions held him safe through the first set, so that deuce was not called in any game. Touchard had the lead at 3—1 and 40—15 in the second set. Paret pulled the game out by five earned passes and won the match at 6—2 and 6—3. Another surprise was recorded in the upper half, as William H. Connell met defeat from John Condon, 6—2, 6—3. The rain seriously interfered with the late play and only one good match was finished in the doubles. In this Dr. William Rosenbaum and William H. Connell scored a quick victory over G. G. Brinkerhoff and F. Hartmann, a Westchester pair. The score was 6—2 and 6—love. The summary:

Men's Open Singles.—Third Round—John Condon, Westchester, defeated William H. Connell, Bedford Park, 6—2, 6—3; Gustave F. Touchard, Hamilton Grange, defeated Dr. William H. Rosenbaum, Harlem, 8—6, 6—4.

Semi-Final Round—Jehiel P. Paret, New York, defeated Gustave F. Touchard, Hamilton Grange, 6—2, 6—3.

Men's Open Doubles.—First Round—William H. Connell and Dr. William H. Rosenbaum, Bedford Park and Harlem, defeated G. G. Brinkerhoff and F. Hartmann, Westchester, 6—2, 6—0.

The alumni of the College of the City of New York engaged the 'Varsity lacrosse and baseball teams in honor of dedication day yesterday afternoon on Jasper Oval before big crowds of graduates and students of the college. Both 'Varsity teams succeeded in defeating the former college players, the baseball team winning by 5 runs to 3 and the lacrosse team scoring the only tally of the game.

BON HOMME TAKES THE MAIDEN STAKES

Added Starter, Substituted for High Private, Wins Belmont Park Feature.

ZIENAP FIRST IN HANDICAP

Priscillian and Tileing, Sons of Hastings, Capture Races in the Mud at the Westchester Club's Track.

More than half the horses that started at the Belmont Park race course yesterday ran in two races, the big fields in these, both selling sprints, balancing against very light fields in four other events. Newcomers for the season were plentiful through the card, and, with the track deep in mud from an early morning rain and the weather shifting from Summerlike warmth to Winter cold late in the afternoon, the big crowd in attendance had all the variety that could have been asked. The stake feature of the programme in itself offered more than a satisfying amount of change from the original promise of the race. This was the Maiden Stakes, five furlongs, for two-year-olds, maidens at the time of the closing of the fixture in March.

Eight horses were named to run, and the presence among the eight of F. A. Forsythe's colt High Private, twice a winner of stakes at the earlier meetings, was one of the inducements that brought out the betting men. When High Private and three others were scratched from the race, that portion of the crowd which had regarded the Forsythe colt as a "good thing" declined to credit the reports current that the Forsythe stable, in adding as a starter the colt Bon Homme, was substituting a better horse than High Private. The substitution was made, however, and the Forsythe stable also put up the light boy Shreve as rider of Bon Homme, which helped further to make the public doubtful of the colt's chance. When the field named to run finally was announced, there were six runners, only one of which, the added starter Ruble, ever had been to the post before, but nevertheless the crowd made a warm favorite of Statesman, on the strength of his private reputation, and Bon Homme went to the post well backed at good odds by his stable, with a starting price of 7 to 2 against him. Statesman showed in front for just the moment of the start, and then Bon Homme went past him to the lead, and, racing in front for all the remainder of the distance, won cleverly by a short length, with Statesman second, far off before Eschau third.

The two handicaps that figured on the card brought out the best class horses that ran, but the fields in both were small. In the mile for mares, Beckon was heavily backed, and superseded Zienap as favorite, but after showing a lot of speed in the early part of the race Beckon ran out on the turn and finished last, Zienap winning, ridden out to beat Royal Lady, second.

For the mile and a sixteenth handicap, the three-year-old Priscillian started an odds-on favorite in a field of five, and with eleven pounds more than scale weight, and conceding from fourteen up to thirty-nine pounds to his opponents, romped out in the lead all the distance, winning as he pleased by three lengths from Berkeley, while Dandelion, the top weight, had an easy gallop in last place. Tilein, favorite for the last event, trailed close up on Zal, the pacemaker, for six furlongs, Tileing then going on and winning easily by three lengths.

NOTES OF THE TURF.

P. T. Chinn, owner of one of the most successful stables of the Spring, has secured a contract for the services of the lightweight jockey Stuart Flynn, a successful product of the New Orleans Winter racing.

The Stewards at Belmont Park investigated the accident in which the horse Faust was knocked down shortly after the start of the last race, regardless of the fact that no claim of interference was made. Many of the spectators thought that Tileing caused the fall by jostling Faust, but the Stewards, after questioning the patrol judge, the starter, and the starting judge, decided that the crowding was done by Troublemaker, and the horses were placed as they finished, with Tileing first. Flynn, who rode Faust, was badly bruised.

Frank O'Neill, partner with Fred Burlew in the B. & O. Stable, will try his hand at training with a section of the B. & O. Stable, numbering ten head, which he will take up through the Canadian circuit. O'Neill, a crack jockey of a few seasons ago, heretofore has left all the training to his partner.

McCarter, the beaten favorite for the Metropolitan Handicap, was reported yesterday to have suffered no real damage from the jostling he received in the race Wednesday, though he scraped his side perceptibly when he was thrown against the fence.

The programme for the steeplechase and hunt meeting, to be held by the United Hunts at the organization's new course, adjoining Belmont Park, on May 30 has been decided on and the conditions for five races have been announced. The races, which will begin at 11 A. M., in order that the programme may be finished in time for the crowd to attend the Belmont Park races, includes the Clark Cup Steeplechase for gentlemen riders, the La Montagne Cup flat race for gentlemen riders, the Hunt Cup open steeplechase, the Decoration Day Stakes, steeplechase handicap, and a hurdle race at about two miles.

GANS WINS IN ELEVENTH.

Negro Lightweight Champion Defeats Unholz, "Fighting Boer."

SAN FRANCISCO, May 14.—Joe Gans, lightweight champion fighter, to-night defeated Rudolph Unholz, the "fighting Boer," in the eleventh round of their bout, which was limited to twenty rounds. Unholz was so badly used up at the end of the eleventh round that the referee stopped the fight and declared Gans the winner. The fight was for the lightweight championship of the world.

Unholz had never before appeared in a ring in San Francisco, and the sporting public placed few wagers on the probable result, with the odds favoring Gans at 10 to 8½. There was much speculation on the length of the contest, however, even money being wagered that Unholz would not stay the twenty rounds.

Gans went after Unholz from the very start and at the end of the first round had a slight lead, having partially closed the Boer's left eye with a right hook. In the second round Unholz had slightly the better of it. His right caught Gans on the jaw as the latter was coming in. The third round also favored Unholz, who landed some good punches.

But Gans began to fight in real earnest in the fourth. He floored Unholz with a left uppercut and the Boer was down for the count of five. It was clearly Gans's round.

In the fifth Gans had solved the Boer's style of fighting and easily held his man off, occasionally planting his left to the face. It was Gans's round.

In the sixth the Boer fought back strongly, and did not appear in the least distressed. It was Gans's round. At the end of the seventh Gans had a big lead, and it looked at this stage as if it would be easy sailing, although the Boer seemed not to have weakened greatly.

Gans beat Unholz hard in the eight round and the Boer was compelled to stall. He seemed a bit weak as he took his chair. The bell rang with Gans having easy honors in the ninth.

In the tenth Gans floored the Boer for the count with a right in the pit of the stomach. In the eleventh Gans again floored Unholz and the latter came up so groggy and dazed that he could not see. The referee then stopped the fight and declared Gans the winner.

AUTOISTS TO MEET TO DISCUSS RACE

Rules for Big Transcontinental Test Will Be Formulated To-night.

ENDURANCE OBJECT LESSON

Managers of Independent Association Refer the Event to Its Contest Committee for Sanction.

Representatives of more than twenty-five makes of cars, in addition to several officials and committee members from the leading automobile trade associations, the Automobile Club of America and the American Automobile Association will meet to-night in The New York Times Building to discuss the rules and general arrangements for the forthcoming double transcontinental endurance race which will be conducted this season under the auspices of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A test of this sort, running from New York to San Francisco and return by a slightly different route to the Atlantic coast, is something that has appealed with peculiar force to every one interested in automobiles, whether directly connected with the industry or not. Those makers of cars who have advocated for a long time the holding of long-distance events of such a character that the endurance qualities combined with the economical running of the machine might be demonstrated in the most practical manner have been quick to favor a double reliability run across the American continent. As each car will carry an official observer every detail of the trip, mechanical and otherwise, will be accurately recorded, and the results will form one of the grandest object lessons ever revealed in the annals of the industry toward showing the high state of perfection attained by the modern standard motor vehicle.

So much interest was evinced in the event by the managers of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association that at their regular meeting this week in this city a resolution was adopted asking the Contest Committee to take the transcontinental competition under advisement for the purpose of recommending it to the fifty odd members of the association, who are all makers of motor cars. The Contest Committee consists of H. O. Smith, (Premier;) Walter Marmon, (Marmon,) and A. C. Newby, (National.) The committee will meet soon after the adoption of the rules, and as several members of the Motor Car Manufacturers' Association have already expressed their hearty favor of the plan, it is practically assured that the event will receive the official recognition of the association's Contest Committee, and the suggestion will be made to the members that it is a desirable test to demonstrate the long-distance touring abilities of their machines.

Jefferson De Mont Thompson, Chairman of the A. A. A. Racing Board; A. R. Pardington, a member of the same board and Chairman of the Contest Committee of the Long Island Automobile Club, and Robert Lee Morrell, Chairman of the Contest Committee of the Automobile Club of America, and who was Chairman of the Managing Committee for the recent Briarcliff race, will be present at to-night's meeting. From the trade organizations will be Alfred Reeves, manager of the American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association; Harry T. Clinton of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, Walter Lee of the Importers' Salon, and Frederick J. Wagner, the well-known automobile race starter, who has wide experience in all sorts of contests.

The motor car representatives who have sent acceptances to the invitation for the meeting are E. R. Hollander, (Fiat;) André Massenat, (Panhard;) Paul Lacroix, (Renault;) Walter F. Sykes, (Zust;) Walter Allen, (Mercedes;) J. W. Delamater, (Hotchkiss;) Harry Lozier, (Lozier;) C. F. Wyckoff, (Stearns;) C. A. Singer, Jr., (Simplex;) C. F. Hamilton, (Isotta;) Sidney Bowman, (Apperson;) E. C. Southworth, (Matheson;) W. E. Shearman, (White;) E. C. Van Dyke, (Berliet;) Harry S. Houpt, (Thomas;) F. S. Harrington, (Corbin;) Milton J. Budlong, (Packard;) Charles G. Wridgway, (Peerless;) J. F. Plummer, (Locomobile;) R. D. Garden, (Pierce;) Gen. John T. Cutting, (Oldsmobile;) C. F. Redden, (Studebaker;) Frank Eveland, (Stevens-Duryea;) E. W. Headington, (Haynes,) and W. H. Hulbert, (Garford.)

The rules as drawn up for the race will be submitted for discussion and suggestions. As the prime object of the contest is to show the real value of the automobile when in long and arduous service it is proposed to consider both questions of reliability and economy. Some discussion has arisen among motorists as to the advisability of including the cost of tires in the running expenses of the machines. It has always been the custom in motor events to eliminate the question of tires, and this subject will be thoroughly discussed. Alfred Reeves said yesterday that several members of the Motor Car Manufacturers' Association were in favor of making a stipulation that the transcontinental run should be conducted under the legal speed limitations of the different States through which the cars will pass. This, it was pointed out, would not militate against its features as a race, for in so long a contest the endurance elements will virtually comprise the real qualities of the race.

RACING AUTOISTS DINED.

Harry Houpt and Louis Strang Tell of Their Hopes in Grand Prix.

Harry S. Houpt, Louis P. Strang, and the latter's mechanician, J. T. Marquis, were entertained at dinner last night at the Hotel Marseille, Broadway and 103d Street, by the members of the Thomas motorcar staff in this city, and a rousing lot of speeches were made that continued until after midnight predicting all sorts of good things for the American entrant in the Grand Prix race, the big French speed contest, on July 8. The interesting announcement was also made that Montague Roberts, who has driven Thomas cars so successfully in the last two Vanderbilt Cup events, and who piloted the Thomas machine more than half way across the continent in the New York to Paris race, would also accompany the European party, sailing with Harry Houpt on May 20 on the Lucania, while Strang and his mechanician will sail with the racing car on the Adriatic on the same day.

Louis Strang was called upon for a speech. He said he could drive an automobile better than talk about it.

Mr. Houpt told something of the work that has been done to fit the Thomas car for the foreign race. Among those present were J. E. Bowles, H. G. Vogel, A. S. Robertson, A. D. Frost, Fred J. Titus, R. D. Willard, Frank Bowen, Theodore Sheldon, Montague Roberts, and Frank K. Youngs. E. R. Thomas sent a letter expressing best wishes for the racing crew, as he found it impossible to leave Buffalo to attend the dinner.

WORLD'S ANGLING RECORDS.

Three New Marks Made and One Equaled in Central Park.

Three world's records and a club mark equaled were claimed by the members of the Anglers' Club of New York in their third anual fly and bait casting tournament at the Harlem Mere in Central Park yesterday. The weather conditions were not at all conducive to unusual casting, variable winds affecting the flight of the lines, but this did not prevent Dr. R Johnson Held from surpassing anything that has ever been done, so far as is known, in bait casting for distance with a quarter-ounce bait. Under the conditions, there was no limit to weight of rod or line, but the cast had to be made with a free-running reel. Dr. Held was in good form, surpassing old records three times. At his first attempt he covered a distance of 141 feet, at his second 150 feet, and his last of the five tests netted him 161 feet. The previous American record for amateurs was 131 feet 6 inches, made outdoors, and 137 feet for professionals, made indoors. Dr. Held was not the only one to eclipse these records, E. B. Rice making a cast of 142 feet at his second attempt.

The salmon fly casting for distance, open to amateurs and professionals, resulted in some excellent performances. Amateurs were restricted to rods not over fifteen feet long, while professionals could use any length of rod they wished. Among the competitors were E. J. Mills a well-known professional angler; C. J. McCarthy of Boston, and W. M. Plevins of Northamptonshire, England, who came to New York especially to take part in the Central Park tournament. The Briton will carry home with him to-morrow the title of amateur champion of the world with a salmon rod fifteen feet long, for his best cast yesterday was 129 feet, supplanting the old record of 120 feet, made in Madison Square Garden last year. The professional record with the same length of rod was also increased to 1[illegible]0 feet by E. J. Mills, the old mark being 124 feet 8 inches, made by John Enright of Ireland at the Harlem Mere.

$15 Suits

To claim a suit superior is an easy task. To prove it superior is another matter. We can prove the superiority of our $15 Suits in many ways—principally through the shoulder. Modelled into shape by hand, the superfluous padding being eliminated, the Wm. Vogel & Son shoulder is the most perfect made.

This showing of $15 Suits takes form in a series of new models in the new colorings and weaves. The fabrics are pure wool in every thread.

THE WASTE OF RESOURCES.

According to the gentlemen who have addressed the Conference of Governors at the White House, our National resources are "going, going," and, if we continue our prodigal use of them, they will soon be "gone." From the sea, says Mr. JAMES J. HILL, from the mine, from the forest and the soil, "must be gathered everything that can sustain the life of man." As to the sea, not being a fisherman, Mr. HILL had nothing to say. But we all know that men acquainted with the fisheries are apprehensive that we are too rapidly using up that source of food supply. As to the forests, Mr. HILL points out that we have less than 2,000 billion feet of merchantable timber left, and our annual cut is about 40 billion feet. Once in seven years our draft upon our supply of iron ore in the mine is doubled. The present rate of consumption is about 50,000,000 tons a year, and in forty years, Mr. HILL assures us, we shall at that rate approach the end of all the higher grade ore in large deposits now in sight. Uncle Sam will soon not be rich enough to give us all a farm, for we have of public lands only 50,000,000 acres, surveyed, and 36,500,000 acres of unsurveyed on hand. Last year 21,000,000 acres were disposed of. Take the soil—that great resource we had supposed was not exposed to diminishment. But Mr. CARNEGIE says that more than a thousand million tons of our richest soil are swept into the sea every year, clogging the rivers and obstructing harbors. That we know, of course, when we come to think of it. The gullied old fields of the South tell the story. Copper is a most useful metal, and we have a good deal of it, but production does not keep up with demand, which would be doubled or tripled if the price could be reduced 35 per cent.

Worse than all is the stupid and wasteful way in which we make use of some of our resources, notably the soil. Mr. HILL points out that the average annual production per acre in the whole United States is only $11.38. Even in Kansas, that great wheat State, the average yield per acre for the last ten years was 14.16 bushels. It ought to be 30 bushels. To use land in that way is like loaning money at 1 per cent. when 6 per cent. could be had for the asking. Mr. MITCHELL and Mr. CARNEGIE agree that our coal supply will be exhausted within 200 years. All the experts declaim against our amazingly unintelligent policy toward the waterways, which threaten, many of them, to run dry because of the removal of the forests.

This is a pretty bad showing. Nothing but our National optimism would enable us to stand up against it, for as population increases, and there will be 200,000,000 of us long before the end of this century, the consumption of natural resources will, of course, increase. We remember, though, that while we have been sapping this Continent less than 300 years, and making serious inroads upon its natural wealth less than half a century, in other lands the human race has contrived to get along through thousands of years. That thought is not altogether reassuring, since we are greater consumers than men of other lands. For instance, we use 500 feet, board measure, of our timber per capita annually, as against about 60 feet for all of Europe. Evidently we must do something about it.

The really encouraging fact is that we have begun to do something. We have begun to take thought, and not merely take thought but to take action, for husbanding and restoring the resources of the mine, the soil, and the forest. Up to a time still very recent, we have made use of all that nature supplied with a barbaric prodigality, and with as little regard for the future as was ever shown by primitive man or by more recent savages. Now we are beginning to be saving. The education of the public for the avoidance and checking of forest fires is an illustration of the new spirit. The immensely valuable work of the Government in the Department of Forestry is another. When our forefathers were cutting down the vast white pine belt that stretched from New England to Minnesota, they took no thought of reforestation. Now the lesson is taught us that a forest is not like a cake that when eaten is gone forever; it can under intelligent methods be continued in existence or restored for the use of future generations. Still more valuable is the work of educating our farmers in the intelligent cultivation of the soil. In that work, which is now so well performed by the Government, there is promise of an increase of the National wealth quite beyond computation. Mr. CARNEGIE and Mr. MITCHELL both gave hints for the conservation of the coal supply. It is criminal waste to burn coal in such a manner that we get but 5 per cent. of its potential energy. Inventive genius has been at work for years upon this problem, and there is promise of a marked advance toward its solution. We shall hardly need adopt Mr. MITCHELL's remedy of asking a higher price for coal, if we can devise means of making it do 75 per cent. of the work of which it is capable.

The best augury of all is the assembling of the Governors and wise men of the Nation for a talk upon the subject of economic waste under the roof of the White House. Much as Mr. ROOSEVELT has done, we are inclined to think that this will go down in history as his greatest service to the Nation. Deeply interested himself, he has awakened the interest of the distinguished men who sit under his Chairmanship. He dominates the meeting. He inspires, directs, organizes, works himself, and is the potent cause of working in others. The fact that we are too rapidly approaching the limit of supply in the Nation's resources gets a boundless publicity through this conference. Every man in the Nation will be put on notice that it is time to practice economy, that we must contrive somehow to operate the industries of the United States without so eating into the store of products that keep them going. Every farmer, every mine owner, every great producing corporation will hear this warning, and wherever there is intelligence and the right spirit it will be heeded. It is really a work of the highest patriotism that has been undertaken at the White House.

THE CITY COLLEGE.

The City College, as the College of the City of New York is popularly called, will gain immensely in fame throughout the country by its removal to its splendid new buildings on Washington Heights. To New Yorkers, who have watched with enthusiastic admiration the development of the institution since it was the Free Academy, there is great satisfaction in the thought that the new buildings, architecturally and otherwise, fitly represent its great educational value. We have no other institution in which we take more pride, and to have it housed at last as few great universities are housed satisfies our sense of right. We are not prouder of the City College now than we were last year, or the year before last, but its great usefulness can be measurably increased, its influence for good strengthened, in its new home.

Stress was laid in yesterday's dedicatory speeches on the patriotic spirit which has prevailed in the free college since its foundation and on the large number of its graduates who fought for the Union. Its Presidents for fifty-four years (HORACE WEBSTER and ALEXANDER S. WEBB) were men of military training, who infused the boys with their own ideas. President FINLEY keeps alive the best traditions of the institution. A broad-minded educator, alert and sagacious, his personal influence on the students is a valuable asset of the college.

In our system of free education there is always danger that the upper branches may be cared for at the expense of the lower grades, in which, after all, the most essential part of the work of developing good citizenship must be accomplished. It is the duty of every citizen to do his individual share to preserve the whole system in its integrity. But the value of the College of the City of New York is not to be underrated from any point of view.

BANKS STILL RESUMING.

We have been accustomed lately to hear of banks resuming one by one, but not to have several such announcements made together. This week there is a batch of such announcements. Probably there is no banking institution in town which is not good for its obligations on demand, but it is necessary to go to the suspended institutions for anticipation of obligations. The depositors of the Knickerbocker, for example, are now told that their installments of June 26 and Sept. 26 will be paid on June 1. The plan which has proved so successful in this case has approved itself to 85 per cent. of the depositors of the Mechanics and Traders' Bank, and its opening within a month is hoped for. The prospects for the reopening of the Brooklyn Bank are even better. Nor are the trust companies behind in this race of recuperation. Statement was made in court that the obstruction of the Attorney General is the only obstacle to the resumption of the Williamsburg Trust Company, by the assistance of the Metropolitan Trust Company of Manhattan.

Suspension of payments by a financial institution is something so difficult to condone that regrets must be mingled with congratulations to the embarrassed companies. Their affairs are mentioned here for considerations apart from their individual cases. The repeated resumptions attest cumulatively that conditions were never so bad as they were thought. When conditions are really unsound the culmination of a crisis leads to a lengthening string of suspensions, whereas we now have a mere remnant unable to make good under the most trying conditions imaginable. With such proof of essential solidity the blame for failures must be extended beyond the respective administrations. In a sense the depositors wrecked their own institutions. If they had not made their runs, if they had been willing to withdraw their resources completely, indeed, but in a more orderly manner, the panic might have been lessened, if not averted. And it is a measurable reproach, even if excusable, that the situation was not saved by the solvent banks, who had not the excuse for fright which the less informed and unseasoned depositors might rightly plead. It is preferable certainly that the situation should be redeemed by inherent strength, rather than by coherence and discipline, in meeting shocks to confidence, but it is necessary to record that the institutions which are resuming are rather working out their own salvations than struggling under indebtedness to the savior of their lives. We suffered more than we needed to suffer, and our banks are proving the injustice of the criticism lavished upon them so freely and with so little consideration amid their troubles.

THE SOLDIER'S POINT OF VIEW.

Nobody expects the soldier to be well satisfied with any condition of affairs in which the military art is neglected. Gen. GRANT naturally feels that this Nation is careless about its defenses and relies too much on the revivified sentiment of the coins, "In GOD we trust," for protection. But the National defense must always depend largely on other influences than armed men and coast artillery. The comprehensive plan of the army manoeuvres this Spring receives general approval. The wisdom of having our nucleus of a great army well trained and prepared for emergency is not disputed. But the people are not always thinking of war and perpetually glorifying the professional soldier. When trouble comes they know he will do his duty and will have plenty of assistance.

The ordinary citizen of this Republic, in his daily pursuit of commerce and the peaceful arts, is not warlike, or given to the belief that the army and navy are our only protection. He is not expecting war, but continued peace, and his expectation is likely to be realized. The soldier's thoughts must ever be on warlike things, if he is a good soldier, and it is one of the penalties of his calling that his countrymen are not thinking with him in times of peace.

THE SILENT WOMAN.

It is announced by the newly formed League for the Civic Education of Women that members of President ROOSEVELT's Cabinet, United States Senators, members of the Federal and State judiciary, and professors of the leading universities will speak and teach against the suffrage movement from its platform. The League will endeavor "to get from the silent woman an expression of her opinion" on questions affecting most nearly her political, economic, and social status.

There is enough substance in suffragism to awaken this hostility and formidable opposition. The silent woman of to-day is not the woman of her grandmother's time, partly because of the elevating forces that have given the vocal woman her spirit in demanding the reins of Government. That it is a hasty and overexuberant spirit, one that forgets that this is, after all, a world of divided responsibilities according to natural fitness, and will remain so, her more sober sister is well equipped to point out. That the silent woman has enlisted in her cause the support of the best men of the Nation is an augury of her success.

WORDS.

The London Times points with pride to the astonishing fact that on May 1 it contained, not so many columns of advertisements, not a wonderful array of exclusive news dispatches, but 253,000 words, equivalent to the number contained in three ordinary novels. The first idea of an expert journalist of the American type, on reading this announcement, is that the 253,000 words might have been reduced to 100,000 without the omission of any essential news or expression of opinion. But The London Times differs from other journals in the fullness of its reports of public affairs, and perhaps few of its many words on May 1 were wasted. With its stenographic Parliamentary report, however, its news summary of Parliament, its daily review of Parliament, and its editorial leader on the proceedings, one of its many "features" at this time of the year would be considered somewhat overdone by a busy American reader.

The London Times has been much improved as a newspaper lately. It takes note now of many incidents of human interest which it used to ignore. But the best tendency of modern journalism is not toward the multiplication of words.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Arguments for Ownership. So far as we can see, those of our correspondents who advocate the owning, as against the renting, of homes have as much the better of their opponents in accuracy of figures and straightness of logic as they have in numbers. As one of them said yesterday, the originator of the controversy made his statistical showing impressive by making his comparison between incomparables—that is, by putting the standard of living for his home-owner far above that of his home-renter, and by assuming that the former would live in a rather high-class suburb, the latter in a rather low-class tenement district. Of course, in that way nothing can be proved.

The choice between renting and owning is not optional in the city, properly so called, to the person of small means. Except in rare cases, he must content himself with a flat, and when he counts the cost of moving out into the suburbs he must take into consideration the fact that he will no more be content there with accommodations equal to what he had before than he would be with the same amount of light from gas or electricity that he formerly had from kerosene lamps or candles. The only legitimate comparison is between owning and renting the same premises, and even then mistakes can be made by paying attention to nothing that cannot be set down in definite sums of money. We are all sentimentalists in some degree, and, while opinions differ widely as to what it is worth to live in one's own house, as distinguished from a house belonging to somebody else, there are few or none to whom it is not worth something.

To our charge that the believer in renting had ignored in his computation the probable increase in land value, his reply was that we in turn had forgotten that houses deteriorate and that the two about balance. The accuracy of this, in any wisely selected suburb near New York, is dubious, and the renting advocate has no right to debit the owner with both repairs and deterioration, since the former to a very large extent prevents the latter. There is many a house in the country that is practically as good now as it was fifty or a hundred years ago, and that could not be replaced in its present excellence for three or four times its original cost. Within reasonable limits it is neglect, not the passage of time, that ruins houses.

As for the locking up of capital in the owned home, there is not much in that, for anybody in a hurry for money can almost always get it on real estate security and take his time about selling, and, if the home-owner wants to move, the rent he can get for his house will usually pay the rent he will have to give elsewhere. Moreover, difficulties in the way of frequent and sudden movings are not altogether disadvantageous. Nomads are all barbarians.

A Rule Not Easy To Follow. Admiral EVANS is quoted as saying, in reference to his retirement from active service, that there are two things about which he does not worry—what he cannot help and what he can. The phrase sounds like one of those that must have been made hundreds of years ago and used ever since, and, therefore, we would not dare to credit the Admiral with originating it, but, just the same, we do not remember ever to have run across it before, and it is not in the quotation books.

Old or new, it is a pretty phrase, and not half bad as a rule of life. Of course, it is a council of perfection, and an ideal not to be fully attained by Admirals or anybody else. Every one does worry, more or less, about both the remediable and the irremediable, but certainly action is better than worry in the one case, and resignation, or a cultivated indifference, in the other. The weakness of the aphorism, like that of all its class, is the assumed ease of distinguishing what can be helped from what cannot. That is rarely easy, when the question really arises, and it is often impossible. Hence the temptation to substitute worry for either action or inaction.

Worry is neither hopelessness as to the future or grief for the past; it is more like an anxious indecision than anything else, and indecision has its advantages over the decision that is wrong. "Don't worry" is good advice, and, like most good advice, it is extremely apt to be equally irritating and useless, for the world is more than sufficiently well supplied with things really worrisome, and that fact is as undeniable as any other.

Still, indifference to the irremediable can be cultivated to some extent by everybody who tries. The process is very simple: Restrain the expression of emotion long enough and carefully enough, and the pretense of indifference becomes at least a near-reality, for while the expression of emotion isn't exactly all there is to it, the expression seems to be almost the one condition in which the existence of the emotion is possible for any length of time.

As for Admiral EVANS, his retirement is as it were in the course of nature, foreseen from the beginning of his naval career, the one certainty among many uncertainties. He has doubtless longed for it in many a tired or uncomfortable hour at sea, and he will not find it as unpleasant as it now seems.

Conditions in Need of Explanation. Few more remarkable or disquieting stories have ever been told to the police, or through them have reached the public, than that of OSCAR MUELLER, the young German butcher who says that he killed another young man on the stairway of the elevated railway at Twenty-eighth Street because he had given trivial offense to a group of Italian roughs and no other way to save himself from assassination by them occurred to him.

If MUELLER's story be true, and the police seem disposed to believe it, what appeared to be a peculiarly cold-blooded murder was little or nothing more than a necessary act of self-defense, and the fact that it was necessary, even the fact that MUELLER thought it necessary, indicates the existence on the east side of conditions little less than appalling. MUELLER himself seems not to have been much excited by them or to consider the measures adopted by himself particularly desperate, but that only makes the matter worse by indicating its permanency and its familiarity to a large fraction of the city's population.

It must be remembered that MUELLER's account of the killing varied in important particulars from those given by several eye witnesses of the affair. They made him, not his victim, the member of a gang, but his claim to be an industrious and honest workman can be easily investigated, and if it prove true, he will still have to explain why he coolly prepared himself for deadly battle with his enemies instead of applying to the police for protection after he had been threatened with death.

"Fighting Bob."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Noting the editorial complimentary to Admiral Evans in your issue of May 10, will you allow me to say that the American people may well pause a moment to note the passing from active service of the most picturesque character in our navy, the most brilliant flag officer of the present day? FRANCK TAYLOR.

IRISH ORANGEISM.

Quotes Protestant Authorities in Condemnation of the Cult.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I know Mr. Brown will take off his hat to good loyal Protestant historians, and so that is the only type of authority I shall cite. Lecky says:

> The history of the penal laws should furnish a lasting warning to the persecutors of all religions. * * * The poorer classes in Ireland emerged from their long ordeal penetrated with an attachment to their religion almost unparalleled in Europe.

Edmund Burke said that "the devilish ingenuity of man" never contrived anything worse than those penal laws against the Catholics.

The penal laws opened the way for Orangeism, which was started in Armagh in 1795.

Plowden gives this as a portion of the Orange oath:

> I do further swear that I will use my utmost endeavors to exterminate all the Catholics in the Kingdom of Ireland.

Walpole says:

> The Orange organization openly professed as its object the complete expulsion of all the Roman Catholics from Ulster.

Lord Plunkett, Attorney General for Ireland under the Marquis of Wellesley, calls it "an unlawful association, the object of which is to overstep the pale of the laws and to overawe and control the Government."

Lord Gosford, Governor of Armagh the year Orange terrorism was first set in motion, describes it as "a lawless banditti." Here are his words in an address to the Magistrates at Quarter Sessions:

> The only crime which the objects of this ruthless persecution are charged with is simply a profession of the Roman Catholic religion. A lawless banditti have constituted themselves judges of this new species of delinquency, and the sentence they have pronounced is simply a confiscation of all property and an immediate banishment.

Allison in his "History of Europe," speaking of these wild men, says:

> They obey unknown authority, and too often engage in revengeful and bloody deeds.

T. W. Russell, the present head of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction in Dublin, says in his book, "Ireland and the Empire":

> If the truth must be told, the Orangemen rarely enter a church door. They bellow on the streets about the Pope and the Protestant religion. The public house [he means the saloon] is their temple, the publican is their high priest. They preach a gospel of hate and hatred that would disgrace a race of savages.

These authorities, let me repeat—and they are men of note in their line every one—are all Protestant.

The Contemporary Review, one of the weightiest of the English magazines, printed a few years ago a specimen of the Orange ditties that are sung at the Twelfth of July celebrations, in which the religion of three-fourths of the people of Ireland is thus scoffed at:

Scarlet Church of all uncleanness,
Sink thou to the deep abyss,
To the orgies of obsceneness,
Where the hell-hound furies hiss;
Where thy father Satan's eye
May hail thee, blood-stained Papacy!

Orangemen have made the City of Belfast a by-word all over the earth. It surely would be a sad day for decency, not to speak at all of fair play, that such a vigorous and fair-minded mouthpiece of American opinion as THE TIMES should be the innocent medium of hoodwinking Americans by the publication of an uncontradicted summary of the Irish situation at the hands of a person who boasts of membership in an organization whose history in unhappy Ireland is marked only by riot, by blood, and by special privilege. J. M. WALL.

Morality of Professors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That a college professor can be asked to resign because of views he holds on subjects outside of his teaching helps to explain why our universities are behind the general intellectual progress, instead of leading and forming it, as a university ought to do. It may help to explain, also, why our people look with some disdain upon higher education and prefer to go to money making; business is alive, and there is no censor there to keep one from using his own brain to learn and choose that which he thinks best.

A man's personal difficulties touch neither the question of academic freedom nor the correctness of his theories. And what are "the laws of morality" that you declare to be greater than Bawden? Are they those which create the Tenderloin within view of your windows in the tower? Or are they those of the polygamous Moros, which, according to a dispatch on your editorial page, one of our Generals says must be recognized?

But our university morality has become commercialized, and must be so shaped as to procure endowments. BOLTON HALL.

The Misogynists' Mission.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

How fortunate those women must be who are surrounded by men of such superior intellect as the "Misogynist" and those who share his views. Has not fate been very kind to these women, lacking brains as they do, to have placed some people near them who are endowed with an extra amount of gray matter to do the thinking and the reasoning necessary in this world, the power for which has been denied the weaker sex? What a sad picture my imagination calls up—their mothers and sisters, helpless in a way, who are waiting to be instructed and enlightened! Of course, it is not a slight task for these men to undertake, but with patience and forbearance—oh, not in a month nor in a year, but when many years have come and gone—perhaps their labor will be rewarded, not by instilling into them what nature has seen fit to keep from them, but perhaps a sort of mechanical thinking process which may aid them in the lesser problems of life.

SURE THE MISOGYNIST HAS BRAINS.

The Allen, Benefactor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some twenty-five years ago a deaf mute who pitched for a Staten Island ball team and who had a talent for making crayon pictures asked me to meet his benefactor, who had secured him many orders for pictures. He took me to a place in Bleecker Street and introduced me to a little man about 5 feet 2 inches high and weighing, say, 120 pounds. This man impressed me by his soft voice, gentlemanly bearing, and his kindness to my unfortunate friend. His name was The Allen, and in several visits to his American Mabille I never saw a scene of disorder. But I did see numerous good boxing matches in a well-conducted place. That he could not see the logic of our law, which makes betting on one side of a fence honorable and on the other side a felony, shows that he had the same viewpoint as many of his fellow-citizens. That he refused to bribe the police only adds to the esteem in which I hold his memory. VESTRYMAN.

Two City College Men.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The dinner to-night celebrating the anniversaries of the National Civil Service bill and the New York State Civil Service bill of 1883, comes so near the ceremonies dedicating the new buildings of the College of the City of New York that it seems interesting to note that that part of the State bill relating to municipal matters was drafted by two City College men, Edward M. Shepard and Everett P. Wheeler. Our City College alumni have certainly done their share in public affairs. W. J. E.

CARNEGIE OFF TO SCOTLAND.

Will Return to Vote the Republican Ticket—Sees Prosperity Ahead.

Andrew Carnegie and his wife and daughter sailed yesterday on the White Star liner Baltic on their yearly trip to Scotland. Mr. Carnegie announced with a broad smile that he would return in time to cast a vote for "the nominee of the Republican Party" for President.

Having started the talk along political lines, Mr. Carnegie declared that all the party candidates for the nomination appeared to him to be made of very sound political timber, but he said he was not a seer, and therefore would not predict who would win at the convention. He had a few good words to say for Gov. Johnson.

"There will be a general uplift to business," he said, "as soon as the election is over. When the question of administration is settled business will pick up rapidly and normal conditions return. There is no use in attempting to get around the fact that there is a bit more financial depression and business stagnation than we can afford to enjoy.

"In a general way, it can be said that the industries of the country have held up well. They have held up in a way to show that the swing will be in the direction of complete prosperity when we reach that beneficial period which follows a Presidential contest."

The Baltic carried away Lady Francis Cook, the former Miss Tennessee Claflin, who for her health's sake has been obliged to give up active philanthropic work and seek rest and quiet in Continental health resorts.

Lady Cook had announced the foundation here of a School of Fatherhood and Motherhood, an institution for increasing a knowledge of self among children who have reached the age of understanding. She had purchased a site for the school at Wheatley Hills, L. I., and the plans for a building are under way.

Because of her failing health the project has been temporarily abandoned. She expects to return to America in the Fall if the state of her health will permit.

NAVAL STATION AT JAMESTOWN.

Let Sanitarians Investigate This Proposal Before It Is Adopted.

From The Medical Record.

There is a proposition before Congress to purchase the site of the Jamestown Exposition for a naval training station, but it would be wise before taking action to find out whether young boys can live in health in a place which had always been considered uninhabitable in Summer.

The soldiers in Camp Captain John Smith managed to get through the Summer of last year with only a few cases of typhoid fever and malaria, but it was at the expense of much suffering and under restrictions which were too severe for a permanent thing. It is low ground in which proper sewerage is difficult or impossible, and it is surrounded by swamps which will require a perpetual crusade against mosquitos. On one side it is hemmed in by railroad yards, and on another by the notorious Pine Beach district, which of itself would be a menace to health and morality, for it has been denounced by both the clergy and the medical profession. The midsummer heat was so excessive that no exercises were allowed between 9 A. M. and 4 P. M., and it is not seen how training can be carried on under such circumstances, particularly as the Summer season is the main reliance for drills. As deep water is fully a mile from shore, and the mud flats are exposed at low tide, it is not understood why naval men favor it—if they really do.

The price asked is $950,000 in addition to the $900,000 or so owed by the company to the United States—nearly $2,000,000 for land which cost the company a few thousand, and some buildings of doubtful value and needing rebuilding for naval purposes. This is a case in which it will be wise to let sanitarians investigate and be guided by them, as it would develop a serious scandal if after building a training station it were discovered that the young sailors could not be kept in health nor properly trained in the Summer months.

The Cream of Transit.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. John B. McDonald's opinion on subways which you published this morning is important. At the same time it is like the handle of a jug—on one side. It proposes to add a Lexington Avenue and a Seventh Avenue branch to the present monopoly, and thus not only give to the Interborough all the cream of the transit of the city, but make it extremely doubtful whether capital would undertake to build and operate any other lines. The fact should not be lost sight of that the city has been expending a vast amount of money in the Bronx in the way of cutting through and grading streets, laying water mains, &c., as an inducement to owners to improve their property. But no man in the middle walks of life—the only class looking for economy in the cost of living—could live in the Bronx under present conditions and do business in lower Manhattan without becoming a slave to traffic conditions.

New York, May 13, 1908. C. C. HICKOK.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am a native-born New Yorker, have lived in many sections of the greater city, but have never seen as many apartments to let as this year. This city is run in such a loose, unbusinesslike manner that it would bankrupt any private concern or corporation following such an administrative system. Officials seem to think of nothing but adding enormous expenses to the budget for useless and unnecessary things. Where is this money to come from?

Why, from the owners of property, of course, who in turn, to meet their expenses, must raise the rents.

If the people would keep tab on our officials and make them toe the mark of honesty we could live for just one-half the rents we are now paying, and the owners of the property could make as much, if not more, profit than they do. A TENANT.

Combating Tuberculosis.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Castigan" shows complete ignorance of the methods employed in this city to combat tuberculosis.

Let him first inquire into the work of the Association of Tuberculosis Clinics, and that department of the Board of Health whose entire activity is taken up by tuberculosis.

Diogenes on Aldermen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"A Humble Inquirer" wants to know if the women have any brains. I should like to know if Aldermen, as a class, have any "appreciable amount" of conscience. I have for some time been trying to discover the consciences of the Aldermen, but have so far been unsuccessful.

A DUBIOUS DEFINITION.

You can't predict what the weather will be,
But you know pretty well it won't agree
With the daily forecast, for it defies
The prophetic views of the weatherwise!
For it's hot one day and it's cold the next,
And whatever to wear you're quite perplexed;
It blows and it rains, and it rains and blows,
And sometimes, not often, it even snows!
The flowers may bud and the leaves appear,
But they doubtless do it in trembling fear,
For it's ten to one there will be a frost,
And in twenty-four hours their beauty's lost!
'Tis a time when every one has to go
To that awful fraud, the medico,
Who has such a villainous smiling face,
As his fees, which are high, mount up apace!
'Tis a time of which all the poets say
'Tis heaven! It isn't! 'Tis (well)—'tis May!

CARNEGIE ART SHOW WARMLY DEFENDED

This Exhibition the Best Pittsburg Institution Ever Held, Declares John W. Beatty.

AND MR. CAFFIN SAID SO

Praised the Show's Standard, Director Adds, Before He Rapped It for Its Up-to-Date Sensationalism.

John W. Beatty, Director of the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburg, Penn., had something to say last night at the Holland House about the dispatch in yesterday's papers, quoting Charles H. Caffin, the New York art critic, as saying in a lecture at Pittsburg that the International exhibition at the institute this year is "the latest up-to-date sensationalism, hung by a committee of sensationalists and awarded by a jury of the same kind."

Mr. Beatty had come to town to see Mr. Carnegie off on his trip to Europe. He read the statements attributed to Mr. Caffin, and since he had talked to the critic about the exhibition in Pittsburg, and since he considered that as the head of the institute, he ought to know something about the exhibition he felt that he should make a statement setting forth certain facts.

"This is the twelfth annual international exhibition held at the institute, and it is really international, said Mr. Beatty, and not simply the showing of a society or of a section or one country. About 50 per cent. of all the pictures shown come from Europe.

He told how the jury of ten is selected. All the painters who have ever exhibited at the institute are put down on a list of electors, and every year these are asked to send in their votes for the members of the jury. The men who get the largest number of votes are thereby chosen members of the jury. Since the electors are from all civilized countries, declared Mr. Beatty, and represent all sorts of schools and tendencies, the jury is not packed with members representing one idea in art.

The only restriction on the voting is that, Europe shall never have more than two of the ten jurymen, and that no city shall have more than four.

"Very many of the able painters of Europe and America are represented at the Pittsburg exhibition," went on Mr. Beatty. "It is freely conceded by experts who have visited the exhibition that it is one of the strongest ever held at the institute.

"The jury of this year was one of the ablest we have ever had. They were elected by the painters of Europe and America. They were John W. Alexander, Kenyon Cox, William M. Chase, Irving R. Wiles, W. L. Lathrop, Charles H. Davis, Elmer W. Schofield, Robert Henri, and Albert Neuhvijis. The last comes from Holland. The other foreign member was George H. Breitner, also of Holland, who was prevented from coming this year by illness.

"I do not think Mr. Caffin said, or at least he did not intend to say, what he was quoted as having said. He expressed to me warm words of commendation, saying that he thought the standard of the exhibition this year very high, and higher than that of last year.

"He may have taken a rap at one or two of the painters represented in the exhibition, but the lecturer on art is prone to do this. There is an old conflict between the mere writer on art and the painter, as old as art itself; and probably Mr. Caffin has not escaped this conflict.

"It is always possible to pick out one or two, or even a score of paintings in an exhibition, and make pertinent remarks about them, but Mr. Caffin, I am sure, did not miss the broader and more significant fact, namely, that a very large percentage of the able painters of America and Europe are represented in the present exhibition, and that the collection as a whole represents with reasonable fullness modern art in America and Europe.

"This is the real significance of the exhibition."

DISCLAIMER FROM MR. CAFFIN.

The Pittsburg Reporter, He Says, Did Not Get the Sense of His Remarks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In to-day's issue of THE TIMES appears a special dispatch from Pittsburg referring to my address before the Art Society of that city on the exhibition at the Carnegie Institute. Your correspondent seems to have based his report on a notice that appeared in yesterday's Pittsburg Gazette. The writer had jotted down a few epithets, as nearly as he could catch them, and certain bits of sentences, more or less correctly, and then, with sundry inventions of his own, collocated them into statements that are not only a distortion of my own words, but are ridiculous and offensive in themselves. I paid no attention to this, regarding it as an attempt to create a mild sensation, but it is a more serious matter when such stuff is given circulation and a certain authority by appearing in THE TIMES. In justice to myself, but even more out of respect for my audience and for the good work that is being done at the Carnegie Institute, I beg to be allowed to say that deliberate falsehood could not have so completely misrepresented the tenor and character of my remarks as has the carelessness of this reporter.

The argument of my address was that art moves with the times, and I particularly commended the award of the first medal to a picture that represents essentially the modern spirit. To enforce this I alluded to sundry pictures which in one way or another were behind the times; some of them, for example, being the large display canvases that the French call "machines"; others mere exploitation of technique, and so on. I spoke frankly, as I always try to do, whether my criticism is for or against, but, in every case, stating the reasons for my opinions, in order that my audience might be able themselves to criticise my conclusions.

Here is an illustration of the reporter's method: I spoke of the consideration of the Hanging Committee in placing all the "machines" in one room, where they could not disturb the serenity of the rest of the exhibition. I remarked that the "machines" of the French Salon corresponded to the scare heads in journalism, made large and striking to enforce attention, and that similar canvases appeared also in the Royal Academy, though they generally lacked the ginger of the French ones. Now observe how the reporter has garbled this:

"Charles H. Caffin declared that this year's international exhibition at the Carnegie Galleries is the 'yellow scare-head debased journalism of art, the gingerbread and suggestiveness of the French school.'" Separating some of my words from their context, he has made it appear that what was directed against a few pictures was meant to characterize the whole exhibition. Further, he has taken "ginger" and made it into "gingerbread," and added on his own behalf the spice of "suggestiveness."

His following sentence, which by its context still refers to the whole exhibition, is a fabrication of scarcely thinkable foolishness: "It is the latest up-to-date sensationalism, hung by a committee of sensationalists, and awarded by a jury of the same kind." Much picture seeing may eventually make me mad; but up to the present I am not so far gone in silliness. Neither did I say that "The Bath" was "unmoral and outrageous." Why should I? If it were unmoral, where would be the outrage? Besides, I did not use the word "unmoral." Nor did the following words, that "the artist had formed a barrier between himself and the public," refer to this picture. They have been dragged in from an entirely different context, in which I was discussing the technical mannerisms of certain painters.

Again, your special correspondent says, "About the only good word he had for any of the paintings were those by Cecilia Beaux and Emil Carlsen." The English of this sentence is on a par with its accuracy. I did praise Carlsen, and paid a tribute to the remarkable cleverness of Miss Beaux's portrait. But—and this escaped your correspondent—I did not commend the portrait; on the contrary, I lamented its lack of expression of anything but the lady's exterior, and took occasion to add that other followers of Sargent's method, as well as that artist himself, often sacrifice intimacy of characterization to technical display.

In fact, the only quotation, or conclusion, I will admit your special has got straight, is the following, referring to a portrait of Miss Edith Reynolds: "The picture speaks, but it only says this, 'I am Henri. This is my way of painting. See the virility of it.'"

MISS REID'S WEDDING FIXED FOR JUNE 23

Ceremony to be Performed in the Royal Chapel of St. James's Palace.

KING EDWARD TO BE THERE

He Is Greatly Interested in Espousal of Ambassador's Daughter by Member of Royal Household.

LONDON, May 14.—The wedding of Miss Jean Reid, daughter of Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, and John Hubert Ward, brother of the Earl of Dudley and Equerry in Waiting to King Edward, will take place in the Chapel Royal of St. James's Palace June 23.

King Edward will be present at the ceremony, and probably he will be accompanied by Queen Alexandra. As the Chapel Royal is very small, it will be necessary to limit the number of invitations to the actual ceremony, but afterward there will be a big reception at Dorchester House, the London residence of the bride's father. The wedding will be held in June in order to enable the Earl and Countess of Dudley to be present. The Earl will leave London early in July for Australia, where he is to take up the duties of Governor General.

It is at the personal suggestion of King Edward that the Chapel Royal is to be the scene of the wedding. His Majesty wishes especially to signalize the rare and unique event of the marriage of an Ambassador's daughter in London, and the fact that the bridegroom will, in this case, be the first member of his Majesty's household to marry since his accession to the throne.

Mrs. Reid held a reception this afternoon at Dorchester House, her guests including many of the most prominent American visitors in London. Miss Reid and Mr. Ward are receiving numerous congratulations.

BIDE-A-WEE ENTERTAINS.

Needs Aid To-day for a Country Home for Its Animals Is In Prospect.

The Bide-a-Wee Home for Animals, founded "to spread the gospel of humanity toward dumb creatures by practical example," is to hold a theatrical entertainment at the Waldorf-Astoria this afternoon. Miss Cecilia Loftus will give some of her impersonations there, the Brander Matthews comedy "Frank Wylde" will be played by Miss Katherine Waring and others; Evert Jansen and Jacob Wendell and others will play "Mrs. Hillary Regrets," and a hitherto unplayed sketch by Edward Fales Coward, entitled "The Second Story Man," will be given by Mrs. William Newland Amory, the author, and other players. Tickets can be obtained at the Waldorf.

A farm of ten acres at Rivervale, N. J., only seventeen miles from town, can be acquired by the home for its animals if $1,000 can be raised at once. The home needs such a place, for it has been found impracticable to keep a large number of animals in the city, and last year 4,514 were received and 2,575 placed in good homes, where they are inspected from time to time. A subscription of $250 toward the farm has been promised if the remaining $750 can be raised, and an urgent plea for immediate donations is made by the President.

To his daughter, Mrs. Maria Josephine Maclay of 13 West Thirty-first Street, the testator left $40,000 and a large share of the residuary estate.

WEBER AND FIELDS PLAY TOGETHER AGAIN

And Many in the Friars' Benefit Audience Ask: Why Don't You Do So Oftener?

$10,000 FOR NEW CLUBHOUSE

Almost Everybody in Theatreland in the Audience or on the Stage—Show of Fun and Melodrama.

The Friars' Festival at the New York Theatre yesterday brought a total income from the programmes and the entertainment of approximately $15,000 and a net profit to the organization of fully $10,000. All of this sum, except the 10 per cent. given to the Actors' Fund, will be used to pay the cost of the new monastery in West Forty-fifth Street. Though all the numbers on the elaborate bill were well received, even the closest rival would not contest the superior warmth of the reception given to Weber and Fields in their old vaudeville act, "The German Senator." It was the first time that Weber and Fields have appeared together in public since their separation and the establishment of their individual companies. Both of the old cronies have met with success this year—Weber in "The Burlesque of the Merry Widow" and Fields in "The Girl Behind the Counter." Being in a genial mood, they decided to demonstrate that if they ever really had any personal grievances they are now all forgotten.

When they appeared together yesterday on the stage of the New York Theatre the immense audience greeted them with cheers. They went through the old act, Fields teaching Weber how to play pool, with the house in a constant uproar of merriment. At their very first appearance and before beginning their sketch they had kissed, and the audience knew that the token was not as much of a burlesque as they tried to make it appear. When they left the stage at the end of their act, with a series of old-time Weber-field embraces, the audience showed its appreciation more vehemently than before, insisting on many recalls.

Probably half the people who met either Mr. Weber or Mr. Fields after the performance asked the same question: "Why don't you two get together again, if only for a few performances every season?"

The other principal features of the entertainment were the final Friars' frolic and the production of a one-act play by Eugene Walter. For this "frolic" the stage was set in monastic guise and the Friars sang the "Friars' Song" in gowns and cowls. The new one-act play by Mr. Walter was entitled "Inside of the Circle" and was played by William Courtenay and Frank Sheridan. The action involves two men living in a Hudson Bay post north of the Arctic Circle. It develops that both men have committed murders in moments of passion and are refugees from the law. Through newspapers which have just arrived—a year and two days old—one of the men learns that his dearest friend has been convicted and hanged for the murder he had committed. He then shoots himself. The audience accepted the first part of the piece with good grace, but declined to take the long-continued strain of melodrama seriously.

Among others who contributed to the entertainment were Victor Herbert and Manuel Klein and their orchestras; La Petite Adelaide, George Beban, Bijou Fernandez and W. L. Abingdon in "Captain Velvet"; Mabel Hite, Mme. Josephine Jacoby of the Metropolitan Opera company, Olga Nethersole in recitations, George M. Cohan and members of his company, John Slavin and May Vokes and the Berlin Madcaps, Louise Dresser, R. C. Herz of "The Soul Kiss," Cecelia Loftus, and Frank Fogerty. Henry E. Dixey did not give his selections from "Adonis," as announced.

Luncheon was served to the players on the stage. Friar Father Maurice Dornay of Chicago, the Catholic priest, came from the Windy City especially to attend the festival.

ACTOR KENT HAS SMALLPOX.

In Kingston Avenue Hospital, Brooklyn—Expected to Recover.

S. Miller Kent, the actor, is ill of smallpox in the Kingston Avenue Hospital, Brooklyn, where it was said last night that the attack was comparatively slight and that Mr. Kent was expected to recover.

Mr. Kent first complained of feeling ill several days ago while a guest at the home of his friend, J. C. Yeager, in West Fifty-seventh Street, and then went to his home, at Port Washington, L. I.

Last Saturday his physician, Dr. Philip Grausman, called in other physicians, including those of the Board of Health, and Mr. Kent was then removed to the observation ward of the Riverside Hospital, in East Sixteenth Street, and from there was taken to the hospital in Brooklyn, where all smallpox cases are received.

The apartment of the Yeagers was fumigated and all the residents of the building were vaccinated.

TITLED PLAYWRIGHT'S DEBUT.

London Audience Sees "Lauval," the Work of Lord Howard de Walden.

LONDON, May 14.—Lord Howard de Walden, the present occupant by inheritance from his father of the London estates of the fifth Duke of Portland, a property which entered into the famous Druce claim, has joined the ranks of London playwrights.

His first piece, "Lauval," was given in this city this afternoon and met with a most favorable reception from a large audience of notabilities from the world of art and literature and persons prominent in society. The play deals with the times of King Arthur. Harcourt Williams took the part of Lauval, a dreamy and idealistic soldier of fortune.

BERTA MORENA BETTER.

For a week she has been recuperating at the country house of Otto H. Kahn at Morristown, N. J., and now she is well enough to sail on the Vaderland on Saturday.

Mme. Morena's illnesses have caused her to postpone her first visit to this country for three successive years, and when she did arrive in New York last February she was unable to sing for several weeks. She is engaged for next season.

ENGAGES MELBA'S PROTEGE.

Hammerstein Gets Young Soprano Who He Thinks Has Great Future.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 14.—Oscar Hammerstein contracted yesterday for the appearance this Fall in the Manhattan Opera House of a young woman who, he believes, is destined to have a great career as a singer.

This young woman is Melba's protégé, Martha Leland, who accompanied Melba from Australia to Paris, and has been taking lessons from the prima donna for the last six months.

Melba is greatly impressed with her pupil's voice and accomplishments as a singer. She is classed as an operatic soprano with a remarkable range. She is a tall blonde, and is barely 20 years old.

HOT WEATHER AID TO HORSES.

The S. P. C. A. to Extend Its Work of Cooling Off Exhausted Animals.

As a result of yesterday's meeting of the Board of Managers of the Association for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, the society hopes to extend this year its work of supplying water for horses from street hydrants. F. Augustus Schermerhorn gave $2,000 toward this work yesterday, and the board appropriated from its funds $1,000 more. The money will be used to hire men to attend at various hydrants throughout the city. The work will begin on June 1 and continue until the hot weather ends.

The society will also establish four extra receiving stations for small animals in densely populated sections of the city this Summer, in order that persons having sick dogs or cats and desiring to surrender them may do so with as little trouble as possible.

Funds for this work are provided by the Women's Auxiliary. Mrs. Gordon Knox Bell is Chairman of the committee in charge of this work.

STORK VISITS THE PARK ZOO.

Leaves Four Cubs for the Leopards, Mr. Dick and Mrs. Kitty.

When Head Keeper Snyder opened up the lion house in the Central Park menagerie early yesterday morning, he was greeted by an unusual commotion on the part of the animals, including Mrs. Murphy, the big hippopotamus, and her young son, Caliph, all the way down the line.

Keeper Snyder had been expecting something interesting to happen among his leopard charges, and looked for Mrs. Kitty. She was not in sight. Mr. Dick, her mate, was on deck, however, proudly stalking up and down behind the bars of the cage in which he and Mrs. Kitty are kept. Two or three cages away Dick Junior and Jenny, the cubs born to Mr. Dick and Mrs. Kitty a year and four months ago, were prancing about, as pleased as Punch.

Calling Assistant Keeper Coyle, Keeper Snyder climbed to the top of Mr. Dick's cage, from which point of vantage he could see down into a box in one corner of the cage, which Mrs. Kitty has been using as her very own private boudoir for some time. Mrs. Kitty was there all right, and so were four lively leopard cubs. Then Snyder knew what it was all about.

Later in the day Mr. Dick was moved into an adjoining cage, where he will be kept for a while to give him time to become accustomed to having a quartet of sons and daughters about.

Mrs. Kitty has been in the Central Park menagerie for ten years, while Mr. Dick's sojourn there numbers but two years.

SAYS PHOEBE SNOW:

Politeness Show, to Passengers Both High and Low.

The Lackawanna Railroad, upon which, it will be remembered, Phoebe Snow travels in verse, has sent some advice to its agents, conductors, and other representatives, not concerning coal, but courtesy. The company's folder, which prints the advice, says that its makers believe that all Lackawanna representatives have more courtesy now than the average railway employes, but anyway they would recommend consideration of the subject to those who may not fully appreciate the value of courtesy.

The Golden Rule is the basic principle of courteous treatment, the company tells its conductors. In answering questions they should not put on airs of superiority, remembering always that words are only one means of expression, manner playing quite as important a part. All employes, also, should be as civil to an ill-clad stranger with a ten-cent ticket as to the President of the company.

To clinch its suggestions about courtesy, the company calls attention to the fact that it pays. Not only does it raise the employe in the estimation of the company, but the courteous employe must feel full of joy that each low-descending sun finds that he has that day done the right and kindly thing by his neighbor, the passenger.

Clown Hurt Trying a New Trick.

James Balnau, a clown in the team of Balnau and Shaw, accidentally exploded a blank cartridge while rehearsing a new act with his comrade in one of the big dressing rooms of the Hippodrome last night before the performance. A piece of metal struck him on the shoulder and severed an artery. Balnau was injured while experimenting with the notion of using a blank cartridge in his slap stick to make an explosion when the stick was used.

Union League Dues Put Up to $100.

At a meeting of the members of the Union League Club, held last night at the clubhouse, 1 East Thirty-ninth Street, it was voted to raise the annual dues from $75 to $100. A year ago there was some discussion as to the advisability of selling the clubhouse, and moving to other quarters. The object of raising the dues is to bring in money for new furnishings.

ROCK-A-BYE BABY IN THE GARDEN NOW

"Mothers' Exposition" Opens There and the Stork Becomes the National Bird.

A PRIZE FOR TRIPLETS

But the Warmest Baby in the Whole Show Is a Rubber One Filled with Hot Water.

The "Mothers' Exposition," which is to be in session one week, opened last night at the Madison Square Garden. It is a big baby show. From appearances inside the Garden the stork is the American National bird, and the baby rules the world. President Roosevelt was invited to open the show as an anti-race suicide exhibition, and he wanted to do it, but other engagements not less important, but more pressing, prevented.

Two great plaster storks are the first things to be seen on entering the Garden, another flies aloft carrying a baby in his bill, and still other storks made of cloth, as natural as life, are for playmates for the baby. There is everything in the show that any baby of any age might wish or find necessary to life.

The first of these is the cradle and patent affairs made in the most simple and sanitary manner of heavy muslin, strung on poles and ready to be taken off and put in a washtub at a moment's notice, are placed between the big plaster storks, and babies may be checked there during the exhibition and have the advantage of trying the patent cradles free of charge while their mothers wander around the show.

Last night being the first, none of the babies were out to take advantage of the opportunity, but it is expected to-day that there will be a baby in every cradle and that even the twin and triplet cradles will be filled. There was a crowd around these last night, for every woman at the show wanted to be sure that she was there when twins and triplets arrived. The extra baby cradles are simple, two and three little muslin cradles hung side by side from the same poles. It is said that there will be a prize for any mother who produces three babies for the triplet cradle.

There are all sorts of toys for the children, and mechanical ones which they can work themselves, miniature merry-go-rounds, and swings on which real children were having jolly times last night. A slide which was reached by high steps the small boys mounted with great glee, and scooted hilariously to the bottom. The best of all was a great sand table under a large canopy tent. It was filled with real sand, with tin molds and pails and shovels and chairs around to make it comfortable. The children didn't have a chance with this. Little girls of the Merry-Widow-hat age played in the sand, and a small boy of 20, having the time of his life with the Merry-Widow-hat girl, would cry in peevish tones:

"I'll skatch 'our eyes out," and the little Merry-Widow-hat girl of 18 would reply:

"Don't oo touch me."

It was such fun that the mothers and grandmothers found their way to the sand table later, and the real children didn't have a chance to make mud pies during the evening.

There were doll exhibits showing the work of various institutions, Day Nurseries, Salvation Army in settlement work, and the children's farms, the dolls exactly reproducing real conditions.

The warmest baby in the whole show is a hot water doll. It is made for the baby to take to bed on cold nights; is a hot water bottle in the shape of a woolen-dressed doll. There are all kinds and sizes, and they can be blown up and become simply air dolls.

GEN. WHITTIER DIES AT SEA.

Ernest Iselin, Son-in-Law, Gets Wireless Message—Well When He Sailed.

A brief wireless message received yesterday by Ernest Iselin, his son-in-law, announced the death at sea of Gen. Charles Albert Whittier, well known in this city and Boston. He sailed from this city on Wednesday on the Cunarder Mauretania for a trip to England and Continental resorts.

His death came as a great shock to his daughter and his many friends. He was apparently in the best of health when he sailed, and just before the Mauretania left he stood on the pier telling of his plans and bidding good-bye. Within a few hours after the vessel left port he died.

Gen. Whittier came from an old New England family which traced its American ancestry back to Thomas Whittier, who came over in 1638. Gen. Whittier was born at Bangor, Me., in 1840. When he was still young his parents removed to Boston, and it was there that he received his education. He was graduated from Harvard in the class of '60, and entered upon the study of law, but at the outbreak of the civil war he abandoned his studies and went to the front as a Second Lieutenant in the Twelfth Massachusetts Regiment, Volunteers.

Gen. Whittier served on the staff of Gen. Sedgwick, who commanded the Sixth Army Corps. Gen. Whittier afterward acted as Assistant Adjutant General of the Sixth Army Corps, and was later appointed Adjutant General of the Second Army Corps, under Major Gen. Humphreys.

He married Miss Lillie Chadwick, a sister of Dr. J. R. Chadwick, and two daughters survive—Susie Whittier, who married the Prince Serge Belosselsky-Belozersky, and Pauline, who married Ernest Iselin.

He was an enthusiastic yachtsman and a collector of paintings.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Active and Higher—Call Money Rates, 1½@2 Per Cent.

TRADING HEAVIEST OF YEAR

Metal Group the Day's Feature—Money Still Easier—More Gold to Go Out.

On a volume of transactions running well above the million-share mark stocks advanced again yesterday. In spite of the magnitude of the day's business the trading was mainly professional, and commission house business displayed no notable enlargement. In the early afternoon the movement was halted for a moment by a combination of profit-taking sales and short selling, but the reappearance of support checked the decline, and in the subsequent recovery prices again approximated the high quotations of the day and closed at this level. As has been the case so often in the past fortnight the rise found no support whatever in the day's news developments, which were in themselves of little importance. It was a manipulated market pure and simple, and for variety's sake activity was shifted from the standard railroad shares, which have been of late the leaders, to the metal stocks, particularly to Amalgamated Copper and American Smelting common. An incipient boom in copper shares in London, together with more cheerful news from the mines and from metal markets, was made the basis for the activity in Amalgamated and similar stocks, and by the close of business their prices had been sharply advanced. While the railroad group was strong, and marked here and there by higher prices, Reading was the only conspicuous feature. Its rise of some 2½ points was accompanied by a report that negotiations were under way by which it would secure the Western Maryland, a property now in the hands of receivers, which forms the Atlantic Coast outlet of the projected Gould transatlantic system. No confirmation of such a move was to be obtained, and unless the ambitious Gould programme has been definitely abandoned, a very doubtful matter now that it has been carried so far forward, the report will hardly be verified by future events. Grain markets were firm on weather reports, and the cotton market settled back after an early burst of excitement.

Foreign exchange rates were a trifle easier, but the declines were entirely natural in view of the heavy engagements of the previous day. International banking houses are looking for additional exports shortly. The weekly statement of the Bank of England makes it plain that that centre is in no need of gold, for its percentage of reserve to liabilities stands now at 51.12, the highest ratio reported at this season since 1897. The Bank of France reported an addition of $6,640,000 to its gold holdings. The German demand, however, seems still unsatisfied. Money rates here were shaded a trifle in spite of the heavy losses sustained by local banks, which have paid over on balance to the Sub-Treasury since Friday last $8,605,000. Wall Street paid very little attention to the progress of the rejuvenated Vreeland currency measure, and will continue to display indifference until the Senate has been heard from.

Investors Buying Stocks.

"One of my banking friends made a suggestion to me this morning," remarked a broker to some of his clients yesterday, "which may or may not be of interest. It is at least suggestive of possibilities which the ordinary broker would be likely to overlook, and while not in itself possessing sufficient influence to bring about conditions such as the present rise in the market, it might give a clue to interested parties which would expedite the advance in prices. He told me that for some time there has been a steady investment buying of the good and comparatively good stocks on the list. Little orders and orders for comparatively good-sized blocks of stock have come to institutions which are more or less in touch with concerns in the interior doing an investment business for clients. Apparently the purpose of this buying was not to obtain immediate profits but to be prepared for the possibilities when prosperity actually returns and busines becomes normal. He emphasized the point that I must not suppose that this buying was on the order of odd-lot business. It was much more important than that, he told me, and apparently he regarded it as very important. But he pointed out that he did not regard it as a return of the public to the speculative markets."

Another Million-Share Day.

Million-share days have not been common enough in the last few months to have lost their novelty, although recently there have been several instances of trading on a substantial scale which brought the total above the million-share mark. Heretofore it has been the custom, when the total for the day exceeded a million shares, for the bearish element to shake its head gloomily and predict that it meant distribution and culmination of the advance. Possibly because there are fewer bears or because the possibilities of accuracy are fewer, this was not in evidence yesterday, and more talk was heard of bullish markets than of distributing points. In fact, there seemed to be more unanimity in the matter of accepting the advance as logical than at any time since the movement began, which merely illustrates once more the theory that if you put them high enough everybody will become bullish.

Mystery of a Block of Bonds.

Curiosity was expressed among bond men a day or so ago as to the indentity of the owner of a block of bonds which were being offered more or less quietly throughout the district. It was around $300,000 of general mortgage 5s of a road underlying a Middle West system, which is in turn controlled by one of the big systems of the country. It looked very much as if some institution must be offering the bonds through a broker whose identity gave no clue to their ownership. Careful inquiry and the looking up of all available records did not reveal the source of the offering. Finally brokers came to the conclusion that there was a good chance that the bonds were coming from the treasury of the company, and this was more or less logical in view of the fact that bonds of the company have been sold in this manner before. For some time past the bonds have been par bid for an insignificant lot on the board which helped to make the market. Just what the original owner of the bonds got is not easy to determine, but the broker who was offering them sold them yesterday morning at about 96½, and they were resold almost immediately at a fractional advance. The little mystery concerning the ownership of the block helped to spice the trading.

Puzzle for a Broker.

Some persons have no appreciation of the possibilities of the fluctuations in stocks, and appear to think that because the price is quoted at a certain figure on one day it must of necessity be near that a week or two weeks afterward. One of the members of a brokerage house in the Street received yesterday a letter dated early in April, and mailed from an obscure South American town, asking him to utilize the credit balance the writer had to purchase a block of Union Pacific, sufficient to absorb the aforesaid credit. The letter had been greatly delayed, first through a wrong address, and, second, because of the usual troubles in the matter of transmission of mail from South American points. The letter was a specific order to buy the stock, but the problem confronting the broker is whether he should buy the stock at the present price after it has had a big advance, or ignore the order and try to communicate with the writer. There is no mention of price in the letter, but that does not solve the problem for the broker. If he buy and the stock reacts he will not feel very pleasant about it.

Attitude of Railroad Men.

Railroad men exhibit a spirit of what might be called negative optimism in their expressed opinions with regard to the general situation. Usually they take the ground that conditions will not grow any worse, but that there is not very much basis for hope for immediate improvement. This is how one railroad man puts it: "There is a world of suggestion in that statement with regard to the number of idle freight cars. It is too late in the day now to discuss the reasons leading up to such a condition, but whether they were economic or political, the fact remains that the railroads are not in good shape. From a survey of the situation it does not appear that there is likely to be any further retrograde movement, and, on the other hand, there is not much chance that anything will be done for another month or so, except mark time. But there is no use looking on the dark side of the cloud, particularly if you can imagine that it really has a silver lining. And apparently the present cloud over the business world has its silver lining, which will be revealed in time. Consequently, there is a foundation for hopefulness, if not for enthusiasm."

RAILWAYS HELPING BONAPARTE'S CASE

RECORDS GO BACK TO 1819

Roads Relying Largely for Their Defense in Special Charter Privileges Granted Many Years Ago.

Attorneys for the anthracite coal roads, including the Reading, the Jersey Central, the Lehigh Valley, the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, are now actively at work gathering for Attorney General Bonaparte some of the information which he will incorporate in the suits which he proposes to bring against the coal roads to settle the constitutionality of the commodity clause of the Hepburn law.

While the facts connected with the coal roads' holdings of coal lands are matters of public record, yet the information bearing on the matter is so voluminous that were it not for the co-operation of the railroads themselves the preparation of the Government's case would be a much more onerous undertaking than it is under the circumstances. The co-operation of the coal roads was promised to the Attorney General several months ago. It is the desire of the roads themselves to have the law tested, they being convinced that the commodity clause, which prohibits inter-State railways from transporting commodities other than lumber in which they have any interest, is unconstitutional.

The information which the several roads through their counsel are supplying to the Attorney General has to do largely with their charter privileges and the details of the manner in which the coal lands are held, with particular reference to the liens to which the coal lands have been subjected through the issuance of bonds and other obligations of the coal roads.

The railroads are relying to a very large extent upon special charter privileges, which most of the coal roads enjoy, and the complete record of these is contained in a long series of acts dating back in the case of this State to 1819, and in Pennsylvania back to 1823. How complex the question of determining definitely what the privileges of each road are is well illustrated by the fact that the Lehigh Valley traces its corporate privileges to no less than 300 separate legislative enactments which affect all or parts of its system. The bearing of all of these must be considered in connection with a suit to settle the constitutionality of the commodity clause of the Hepburn law.

The coal roads have carried on their conferences with the Attorney General chiefly through Robert De Forest, general counsel of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, who has several times recently had conferences with the Attorney General.

DISCUSS COMMODITIES CLAUSE

Its Suspension Will Probably Be Voted in Senate To-day.

WASHINGTON, May 14.—The Senate to-day resumed consideration of the joint resolution suspending the commodities clause of the railroad rate law. Voting on the bill and amendments was postponed until to-morrow.

After the Senate went into executive session the discussion was resumed informally. It developed that the opposition to the passage of the resolution was not so great as had been supposed, and it is practically conceded that it will be passed to-morrow if Mr. Foraker is able to be present.

The Inter-State Commerce Commission to-day sent to the Senate a statement made by B. F. Brush, receiver of the Western Maryland Railroad Company, relating to his compliance with the commodities clause of the Hepburn Rate bill. Mr. Bush denies that in the operation of the Western Maryland he is not complying with the commodities clause, as stated by the commission to the Senate in a previous communication. He said:

"I had no intention of so informing the commission, and such is not the case, your telephone inquiry having either been misunderstood by me or my reply to your representative at the telephone having been misconstrued."

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 14.—There was a brisk demand for the local copper shares to-day and prices have made several new high records for the present movement. The Butte coppers, Amalgamated, Butte Coalition, and North Butte, were the most active features, all of the above-named stocks showing good advances and reaching new high prices for the year. Copper Range was also active and in demand, gaining about 2 points, while Calumet and Arizona sold up 3 points, and the whole list was strong at advancing prices. The close was buoyant and at about the highest level of the day.

THE FOREIGN MARKET.

Tone of European Bourses Cheerful with Prices Tending Upward.

LONDON, May 14.—Money was abundant and easy on the market to-day, and discounts were quiet.

The Stock Exchange experienced another cheerful session, and slightly exceeded yesterday's improvement under the influence of cheap money and bear covering, but the market closed below the best for the day. The settlement was concluded satisfactorily.

Copper shares were strong under the lead of Rio Tintos, while stronger American news helped Amalgamated and Anaconda. The absence of any change in the Bank of England's rate of discount assisted first class securities, as, although money is cheap, the situation does not warrant a reduction while the keen Continental demand for gold exists.

American securities were fairly active above parity in the forenoon, the declaration of the usual Harriman dividends helping the improvement. Later, New York supported its favorites, and the market closed steady.

Bar silver steady; 24¼d. per ounce. Money, 1@1¼ per cent.

PARIS, May 14.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm, and trading was active on the advices from New York. The private rate of discount was ⅛ lower at 2 5-16 per cent.

BERLIN, May 14.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were firmer.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Strong Advance and Heavy Fall—Closes 5 to 29 Points Down.

Cotton made sensational fluctuations yesterday, with new high records for the bull movement, but in the afternoon ruled very weak and unsettled on English cables expressing an unfavorable view of the situation and the prospect for better weather. The close was weak, 6 to 30 points lower. Sales for the day were estimated at 450,000 bales. After the close New Orleans advanced 10 points.

The local market opened firm at an advance of 5@29 points on sensationally firm cables, big English spot sales, reports of tornadoes, and talk of a July corner.

The range of contract prices was as follows:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Wed'y's Close.
May	10.05	9.49	9.46@9.48	9.76
June	9.94	9.94	9.46@9.48	9.72

February	..	..	9.04@9.06	9.11
March	9.21	9.14	9.07@9.09	9.16

The local market for spot cotton was quiet and unchanged at 11.30 for middling upland and 11.55 for middling Gulf. Sales, 1,110 bales.

Southern spot markets were telegraphed as follows: Savannah steady, ⅛c higher at 10⅝c; sales, 100 bales. Norfolk firm, ⅜c higher at 11c; sales, 174 bales. St. Louis firm, ⅛c higher at 10⅞c; sales, 582 bales. Augusta steady, ⅛c higher at 11¼c; sales, 327 bales. Galveston quiet, unchanged at 10⅝c; sales, 450 bales. BAYSTATE

To Bay State Stockholders:

That you may not confuse the market movements of Bay State Stock with the real affairs of the company, I will say:

While everything done at the stockholders' meeting Wednesday was satisfactory beyond my expectations, and all things accomplished were necessary to the carrying out of my plan, they were not such as should cause the stock to advance materially in price.

Bay State Stock should not advance materially in price until the next step is completed—the turning over to the company by the Receiver of the assets of the company. When this is done Bay State Stock should, and probably will, begin to rapidly and continuously advance. Until this is done there is no sound reason for any substantial appreciation in the price of the stock.

THOMAS W. LAWSON,
President.

An absolutely false impression prevails that rents in the uptown section are extravagant. There is no section in this country offering such limitless opportunities for doing business where the demands of landlords are so moderate and the character of the buildings better suited to modern commercial needs.

BANKRUPTCY SALES.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, SOUTHERN District of New York.—In the matter of J. CAMPBELL SMITH, Bankrupt.—No. 7,022.

Notice is hereby given that Francis M. Applegate, the Trustee herein, has filed with me his petition for leave to sell at private sale, on competitive written bids, certain assets of the bankrupt, consisting of a certain interest in remainder under the will of Richard Augustine Smith in a fund $45,912.16, (being one-half of the remainder in said fund as fixed by a final judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, New York County, entered November 28, 1905, as amended by an order entered therein March 7, 1906, in the case of The New York Life Insurance and Trust Co. as executors, &c., against Letitia C. Sands and others;) and that a special meeting of creditors to consider, act, and pass upon the said petition, will be held at the office of John J. Townsend, referee in bankruptcy, 45 Cedar Street, City and County of New York, on the 3d day of June, 1908, at 2 o'clock P. M.

Notice is hereby further given that the competitive written bids for said property should be sealed and sent to the Trustee at his office, No. 20 Broad Street, New York City, plainly marked "Bid for J. Campbell Smith property," and that such bids will be publicly opened by said Trustee at the special meeting of creditors at the time and place aforesaid to be acted upon by said creditors. The corpus of said fund is in the possession of the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company, as executors of and trustees under the last will and testament of Richard Augustine Smith, No. 52 Wall Street, New York City, and the life beneficiary, Mary S. Barker, is about 36 years old.

The trustee will not, except with the approval of the creditors and the referee, accept any bid unless it is sealed and at least equals the appraised value of said property, and each bid must be accompanied by a certified check or cash for at least 10% of the amount of the bid to be returned to the unsuccessful bidders, or in the event that a private sale be not authorized. The Court also reserves the right to reject any or all bids.

Notice is hereby further given that in the event that the bids submitted be rejected and no order is made by the referee to sell such property at private sale, the said property shall then be sold at public auction, under the direction of Francis M. Applegate, the trustee, by Charles Shongood, U. S. Auctioneer, at 113 Leonard Street, New York City, on the 16th day of June, 1908, at 12 o'clock noon. Details of interest to be sold can be obtained of trustee or his attorney.

BANKERS URGE CITY TO REFORM FINANCES

City's Methods of Keeping Accounts Called Antiquated at Savings Bank Convention.

BONDHOLDERS KEPT IN DARK

A Tribute to the Strength of New York's Savings Banks by Supt. Williams—A Gain in Accounts.

Plain talk about the city's alleged loose methods of keeping its accounts, and with particular reference to the city's bond issues, was heard at the annual convention of the Savings Bank Association of New York State held yesterday in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce. President W. Bayard Van Rensselaer, who presided, referred to the need of reform as follows:

> My attention has been called to the facts that the savings banks of this State have invested $150,000,000 in the bonds of the City of New York, and that the accounts and methods of the Department of Finance of the city are now kept in an antiquated manner. It is of great importance to the savings banks that the municipal finance of all the cities in whose bonds we may invest should be placed and maintained upon a sound and business basis.
>
> These reforms in the finances of New York City will not be brought about, it is feared, without a strong expression of public sentiment, and the emphatic demands of those institutions which should know the exact state of affairs.

C. A. Miller offered a resolution calling upon Controller Metz to immediately reorganize the financial system of the city and making the following recommendations:

> That responsibility be fixed for every financial transaction as to the city's affairs.
>
> That a basis be provided for the prompt and intelligent audit of claims for goods furnished and work performed.
>
> That a method be installed for proving the accuracy of collections not only by cash books, but by reference to evidence of moneys due and moneys actually received.
>
> That it be possible for investors in New York City bonds to know the total liabilities of the city as a means of determining the values and legality of such bonds before purchase.

Ex-Congressman William J. Coombs, President of a Brooklyn bank, said that the city occasionally did strange things with its property. His bank, he said, had made a loan upon a building and grounds now owned by the city.

"The city," he said, "has moved the building and even the ground, and we hold a mortgage to-day on a hole in the ground. Presumably the city is responsible, but somehow or other we can get no information about the matter from the city. I approve of this resolution. I believe that there is no doubt that every one of New York City's securities will be paid, but the fact remains that in the test of solvency bonds of Eastern cities are commonly disposed of on a 3.80 basis, while those of New York sold on a 4.20 basis. I have great confidence in Controller Metz, and I am in thorough accord with what he has done."

The Miller resolution was passed.

The plan for the reorganization of the Department of Finance adopted by Controller Metz was submitted by the Bureau of Municipal Research in February last. The work has not yet begun, and is delayed pending the approval by the Aldermen of the employment of expert accountants necessary to perform the work. The Controller's application has been before the board for several weeks, but as yet it has taken no action.

John Harsen Rhoades, in a paper on "Banking," criticised the new State law providing for the amortization, or gradual extinction, of premiums or discounts on securities. He thought the law was unwise. "It may operate to hide a deficit or destroy a surplus," he said, "but one thing it will never do is to show the actual condition of a bank."

State Superintendent of Banking Clarke Williams made a brief address, in which he praised the administration of the savings banks in this State, which he called philanthropic institutions, declaring them to be the strongest of their kind he knew of.

Mr. Williams suggested that the proper field of the savings banks was being encroached upon by other institutions, and that an investigation into these encroachments by "financial and mercantile concerns, some of them State and some National," would be a profitable work for the association.

In his report President Van Rensselaer said that notwithstanding the heavy withdrawals from the savings banks during the money stringency last year there had been a gain of 45,638 in open accounts on Jan. 1, bringing the total up to 2,371,477.

There were two subjects, he said, which ought to be considered carefully by the association, one the advisability of insuring or guaranteeing deposits, and the other the feasibility or desirability of requiring a notice of all withdrawals. This latter measure was successfully enforced by the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, he explained, which had 265,206 open accounts on the first of the year, considerably more than any New York State savings bank.

President Van Rensselaer, having declined a renomination for the Presidency, Charles A. Miller, Vice President of the Savings Bank of Utica, was elected to succeed him.

COTTON UP AND DOWN.

Fear of a Corner Drives In Shorts—Livermore a Big Winner, It's Said.

After a rise of 31 points above Wednesday's closing prices, July cotton broke on the Cotton Exchange yesterday to 9.48, or 59 points from the top of the market, and closed at a net decline of 30 points, or $1.50 a bale, after transactions of 450,000 bales.

The day opened with an excited market in Liverpool, where spot cotton jumped 26½ English points, equivalent to about one-half cent per pound, on heavy buying by spinners who had allowed their stocks to get abnormally low. The fear that the market for spot and nearby delivery had been cornered was the principal factor in the rise abroad on which the spinners, according to the late cables, took 25,000 bales.

The same fear of a corner, coupled with bad news from the cotton belt, drove shorts to cover in the local market in the early hours of trading, and the initial advance put July cotton up to 10.07 cents per pound. At that price July cotton is about $10 per bale higher than it sold for in April, when the July option sold as low as 8.20. Yesterday May cotton sold up to 10.05, which compares with a price of 8.03 in April.

Opinion among cotton brokers yesterday was divided as to the extent of the manipulation by which the rise was engineered.

J. L. Livermore, who has been one of the successful traders in the cotton market for a year, is said to have unloaded a long line at the high prices yesterday, but the idea that he had cornered the market was generally discredited in the trade.

Trust Company Scatters Her Ashes.

An unusual trust was carried out by an officer of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company yesterday as executor of the estate of Miss Frances S. Miller, a music teacher. Miss Miller died on Sunday at 100 West Seventy-eighth Street, leaving an estate of $20,000 or more to immediate relatives and friends. It is expressly stipulated in the will that her remains shall be cremated and the ashes scattered under the supervision of the executor. The cremation was effected at the Fresh Pond Crematory on Tuesday afternoon, and the scattering of the ashes was carried out yesterady without ceremony.

AS TO COLLUSION IN ASPHALT

Barber Company Says There Is None and Cites Bids for Repairs In Proof.

A representative of the Barber Asphalt Paving Company made this statement yesterday in reply to the declaration of Borough President Ahearn that bids for asphalt repairs were proof positive of the existence of an asphalt trust:

> Charges that the bids just opened for asphalt paving are much higher than last year's, and that they show collusion on the part of the paving companies to increase prices, are not borne out by an examination of the bids for 1907 and 1908. Last year the work was let in three sections, on which the bids by the several paving companies were: Barber Asphalt Company, $1.38 per square yard for all three sections; Asphalt Construction Company, $1.86 for Sections 1 and 2; Sicilian Asphalt Company, $1.20 for Section 1; $1.50 for Sections 2 and 3; Uvalde Asphalt Company, 83 cents for Sections 1 and 2. The Uvalde bid was known to be very largely below cost and the contractors lost a large sum on the work.
>
> This year bids were advertised three times. At the first letting the Uvalde Company bid $1.49, the Sicilian Company $1.60, the Asphalt Construction Company $2. The Barber Company did not bid. After the work had been readvertised, bids opened in April were: Barber Company, $1.56; Sicilian Company, $1.60; Uvalde Company, $1.49. These bids were also rejected and the work advertised in three sections, for which the bids opened this week were: Barber Company, $1.56; Uvalde Company, $1.48 for all sections; Sicilian Company, $1.55 for Sections 1 and 3, and $1.52 for Section 2. The Asphalt Construction Company bid $2.05 on the work in Section 3.

The location of the plants of these companies is said to have much to do with determining the price at which the companies can perform the work required.

TWO CLEVELAND BANKS CLOSE

Reserve Trust Co. Assigns and Withdrawals Shut Up American Savings.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 14.—The Reserve Trust Company made an assignment to-day to the Superior Savings and Trust Company. The liabilities of the concern are about $2,700,000. Inability to realize on outstanding loans is said to have precipitated the failure. Officers of the bank say depositors will be paid in full.

The capital and surplus of the bank is $300,000. Adam Graham is President and William N. Perrin Secretary and Treasurer. The latter was formerly a Director in the Ohio Trust Company of Norwalk, Ohio, which closed its doors in January last.

The American Savings Bank, a small concern, closed its doors this afternoon following a run of withdrawals. It was stated that an attempt was being made to have one of the large financial institutions of the city tide the bank over its troubles and that it was hoped its doors could be reopened soon. The capital of the bank is $50,000. It has deposits amounting to about $300,000.

Its President is T. Epstein. The refusal of its Clearing House representative to clear for the concern to-day is said to have led to the closing of its doors.

The Plain Dealer recently gave to its readers several thousand blanks, each accompanied by a fifty-cent check on the Reserve Trust Company, which to-day closed its doors and made an assignment. In the last ten days large numbers of new accounts were opened at the Reserve as a result of this. None of these depositors will lose a cent.

To-night the paper issued a statement saying that it will pay all money deposited on account of the checks issued by the company on the surrender of the passbooks of the depositors, certified by an officer of the bank that they are correct and that deposits were made on account of The Plain Dealer checks. The deposits thus made good will probably exceed $50,000.

GETTING AFTER McINTYRE.

Broker Served with a Summons and Will Be Examined In Court To-day.

The examination of Thomas A. McIntyre, head of the suspended brokerage firm of T. A. McIntyre & Co., which was to have taken place before Commissioner Gilchrist yesterday, was again postponed until this afternoon at 2 o'clock, when there is a possibility that Mr. McIntyre will be present.

A subpoena server, armed with a court order restraining any one in the employ of Miss Allston's private sanitarium, in West Sixty-first Street, from preventing him from getting access to the supposed invalid, went to the sanitarium yesterday afternoon, and Mr. McIntyre agreed to be in court to-day. The order was issued by Judge Hough.

INTER-MET INQUIRY AGAIN.

Public Service Board to Hold Final Hearings for Record Purposes.

The long interrupted inquiry by the Public Service Commission into the Inter-Met is now to be wound up. Its public hearings came to a sudden end in the Fall at the beginning of the financial panic. It was generally understood that the amazing revelations of the methods of "high finance" had got on the nerves of Wall Street, and that pressure was brought to bear to stop temporarily at least the investigation by William M. Ivins.

Ever since then the accountants of the commission have been going over the evidence. Their work now is nearly complete, and one or more public hearings will be held to read the result of their labors into the minutes and put on the stand such witnesses as may be necessary to confirm them.

DROPS TENN. CENTRAL OPTION

Southern Railway Not to Buy Line, but Pledges Its Bonds for Loan.

The option which the Southern Railway holds on about two-thirds of the general mortgage bonds and stock of the Tennessee Central Railroad, which was obtained three years ago and which expires July 1 next, will not be exercised, it was learned yesterday.

The Southern Railway has invested in $2,500,000 of the first mortgage bonds of the Tennessee Central, and these are to be pledged as part of the collateral for the Southern's new $15,000,000 note issue. The road regards this investment as absolutely safe, whether it acquires stock control of the Tennessee Central or not, and the disposition of the Directors now is not to spend any money for the acquisition of new lines.

$150,000,000 GOULD MORTGAGE

Planned to Provide for Western Pacific for Years—Western Maryland Rumors.

The amount of the mortgage which the Denver & Rio Grande proposes to authorize in connection with the rounding out of its finances, including the provision for the completion of the Western Pacific, was said in Wall Street yesterday to be $150,000,000. This would provide not only for the current and future requirements of the road for many years, but would also cover the outstanding bond issues of the system.

The Western Maryland, another of the Gould properties, again figured in Wall Street reports yesterday, it being said that the road was likely to pass to the Reading. Directors of the Reading denied that any such plan was in contemplation.

Copper Quotation Committee Filled.

The vacancies made in the Copper Quotation Committee and the Pig Iron Committee of the New York Metal Exchange by the refusals of James E. Pope and John R. Stanton to serve, respectively, were filled yesterday at the meeting of the board. W. Parsons Dodd of the Quincy Mining Company was chosen a member of the Copper Quotation Committee and Morton B. Smith a member of the Pig Iron Committee.

Butterick Co. Resumes Dividends.

The Butterick Company, of which C. W. Morse was Vice President, resumed dividends yesterday by the declaration of a dividend of one-half of 1 per cent., payable June 1 to stockholders of record May 20. The company from the time of its organization in 1902 paid 4 per cent. a year in quarterly disbursements. The last payment was made in September of last year.

CANADA TO REMAIN LOYAL, SAYS BRYCE

Will Never Break with Great Britain, Ambassador Tells Canadians at Their Dinner.

NO ANNEXATION WITH U. S.

But Independence Bound to Come, Declares Judge Longley of Halifax—Praise for Secretary Root.

Standing beneath the intertwined Canadian and United States flags, with a full-length portrait of President Roosevelt on his right and one of King Edward VII. on his left, James Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington, paid a loyal tribute to Canadians at the Canadian dinner in the Hotel Astor last night, and declared that the colony would always remain loyal to the mother country, despite the prediction of Justice J. W. Longly of Halifax, Canada, that at some time in the future Canada would be an independent factor in the world of nations.

Five hundred Canadians and other sons of Canada who have made the United States their adopted home attended the annual dinner. Until long past midnight they listened with attentiveness, interwoven with great bursts of applause, to the many speeches lauding both Canada and the United States and proclaiming an everlasting friendship and community of interest between the two countries.

Ambassador Bryce was the guest of honor, and he was introduced in the course of a laudatory address by the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patten, President of the Princeton Theological Seminary. Mr. Bryce had no set toast, and as he arose to address the gathering he was received with a tremendous burst of applause.

"Great Britain was never prouder of Canada than she is to-day," said Mr. Bryce. "Great Britain believes in Canada, and always wants her to remain a part of the British Empire. But it is not of the relations between Canada and Great Britain that I would speak. Rather let me say a word about the relations between Canada and the United States. Each country has power to render great service to the other. Each country has a great deal to learn from the other. Each country has some better things than the other. It is not for me to pick out the best or the worst things in each country. You can understand the reason why I cannot do so for public consumption.

"Each country has given to the other great and good men. J. J. Hill, the great American railroad magnate, is a Canadian, as is Bishop Brent of the Philippine Islands, who was recently chosen for the Episcopate at Washington. The United States has given to Canada equally good men Each is, therefore, indebted to the other.

"The United States and Canada have certain aims in common, more notable among these is the protection of natural resources. There is now going on in Washington a conference of vast importance to this end, which was instigated by President Roosevelt, who has the natural resources of the country greatly at heart. There are so many baseball games to report and with murders filling the newspapers in addition thereto, there has been little room to report diplomatic doings, but there have been several diplomatic happenings of late that redound to the benefit of both the United States and Canada.

"I refer to the treaty affecting the fisheries of the great lakes, the delimitation of the boundaries between the United States and Canada, and, most important of all, the arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain, which makes the settlement of controversies that cannot be overcome by negotiations positive in a peaceable manner rather than to have long-continued bickering, with a possible resort to arms."

Mr. Bryce then paid a glowing tribute to Secretary of State Elihu Root.

"There has never been a statesman in this country who has done more or who is better fitted to seal the friendship existing between the United States and Canada than is Mr. Root," said Mr. Bryce, "I do not know of any statesman who has brought a clearer vision to the subject or who has handled it with greater wisdom than he has."

Concluding his address, Mr. Bryce called attention to the great good done by such clubs as the one he was addressing.

"Friendship of nations is based on friendship of individuals," he said, "and the fostering of these friendships means the continued friendships of the nations. This friendship is bound to continue even though there is no unity in fact between the two nations, for Canada will, I believe, always be an integral part of the British Empire."

Other speakers and their toasts were "Canadians," Dr. Neil Macphatter, President of the Canadian Club of New York; "Canada of To-day," Charles Marcil, M. P., Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, Ottawa; "The Last Great West," Hugh Guthrie, Esq., K. C. M. P., Guelph, Canada; "The Relations Between Canada, Great Britain, and the United States," Justice J. W. Longley of Halifax, Canada, who said that he did not believe there would be any annexation of Canada by the United States, but that, on the contrary, Canada would one of these days become a separate nation in the world without being a colony of Great Britain, but would instead be an ally.

"The Greater Federation," by George Tate Blackstock, K. C., Toronto; "East and West," Lieut. Gov. D. C. Fraser, Halifax; "The United States of To-Day," J. Van Vechten Olcott, member of Congress from New York, and "English Liberty and English Law," the Rev. Dr. N. McGee Waters of Brooklyn.

Those at the guest table were: F. H. Ballantine, President Toronto University Society, New York; Robert Foulis, Chief Caledonian Club, New York; Dr. William Ferguson, President McGill University Society, New York; John S. Crosby, President Missouri Society, New York; the Rev. Dr. Anthony Evans, President St. David's Society, New York; Dr. John A. RAILROADS OPPOSE BILL.

It Requires Pay of Employes Twice a Month—Labor Urges Measure.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 14.—Gov. Hughes returned at noon from Washington, and immediately began a series of hearings on several bills before him for consideration, including a measure to compel railroad corporations to pay their employes semi-monthly. The Governor said that he would not accept any engagement out of the city until he has disposed of the thirty-day bills before him, the time limit expiring on May 23.

Representatives of the New York Central, Lackawanna, Erie, Delaware & Hudson, Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and Pittsburg, Shawmut & Northern Railroads opposed the bill of Assemblyman Filley requiring railroad corporations to pay their employes twice a month instead of monthly, as at present. On the other side representatives of many labor organizations, asserting they voiced the views of thousands of railroad men, urged the Governor to approve the bill.

WEMPLE IS RENOMINATED.

He Voted Against Gambling Bills—Foelker Not Improving Rapidly.

Special to The New York Times.

SCHENECTADY, May 14.—William W. Wemple, who represents the old Schenectady-Saratoga District in the State Senate, was unanimously nominated for Senator to-day in the new Thirty-first District—Schenectady, Montgomery, and Schoharie Counties.

Mr. Wemple voted against the Agnew-Hart race-track gambling bills, and it was believed that some demonstration against his nomination would be made.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 14.—Senator Foelker's condition does not meet the hopes of his attending physicians. At his present rate of progress it will be six weeks before he will be able to take up his duties at Albany. He is in a continuous state of nervous excitement over his inability to be at Albany to help the Governor in the anti-gambling fight.

HEARING ON ROBINSON BILL.

Franchise Measure to Amend Elsberg Act Up at Albany To-day.

The Robinson bill amending the Elsberg act comes up for hearing to-day at Albany. It permits the city to grant a franchise for operating a road for fifty years with an indefinite number of possible renewals, whereas the present law makes it impossible for any one to obtain a franchise to operate a road for more than twenty years with one renewal for a like term.

The Public Service Commission will not be represented at the hearing.

JEROME AND HUGHES MEET.

District Attorney Shows No Feeling Against the Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, May 14.—On his way to Poughkeepsie this morning District Attorney Jerome met Gov. Hughes in a Pullman of the fast mail of the New York Central. The Governor and the District Attorney greeted each other cordially and sat together chatting for half the length of the trip between New York and this city.

This is the first meeting between Gov. Hughes and Mr. Jerome since the investigation of the charges of the King Committee was ordered by the former. If there is any feeling on the part of the District Attorney against the Governor because of the recognition of the King charges, it was not apparent when they met.

TO TRY THE MONORAIL HERE.

The Interborough Company May Make the Experiment This Summer.

Three miles of monorail track may be laid experimentally this Summer by the Interborough Railroad, according to the statement of A. A. Gardner, counsel for the corporation, at a hearing yesterday before the Public Service Commission. An inquiry into the equipment and service of the Pelham Park Railroad and the City Island Railroad between Bartow and Belden Point was in progress when Mr. Gardner spoke of the proposed experiment.

The American Monorail system, which was operated successfully last year at the Jamestown Exhibition, will be the system tried. It is the invention of James A. Cunis of Baltimore, and will cost about $25,000 a mile to equip. The power will be electrical, and the cars will run upon a ground rail instead of being suspended as in some monorail systems.

TRINITY SPENT $199,142

For Parish and Outside Work in 1907—New Year Book Out.

The year book of Trinity Church, the issuance of which had been delayed in order to insert a notice of the death of the Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, appeared yesterday. It states that Trinity Church and its eight chapels contributed a total of $94,575 during the year, but does not state what the money was used for. Seventy-two thousand six hundred and eighty dollars was appropriated by the vestry for parish purposes, and $31,885 for purposes outside the parish, the three sums making a total of $199,142.

The statistics of the parish show that it has 6,939 communicants, 3,641 Sunday school officers, teachers, and scholars, 530 scholars in daily parish schools, 173 scholars in parish night schools, and 348 scholars in industrial schools.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE CITY

Amount to $74,743,510, but Will Be Greatly Reduced.

There are claims outstanding against the city, awaiting judgment, to the amount of $74,743,510, and Controller Metz is taking stock and trying to find out exactly where the city stands. Jeremiah A. Mahony, Chief of the Bureau of Claims Adjustment, has supplied him with the following claims:

Under the prevailing rate of wages	$4,231,464
For personal injuries	20,476,312
Various claims arising out of extra work, damages to real and personal property other than by sewers	42,026,249
Suspension actions	1,784,496
Awards for street or park openings	3,800,000
Damages by sewers	2,425,386

Of these claims, the only one which will affect the debt limit is the $3,800,000 awards for street openings.

CITY BREVITIES.

After being run down by an automobile last night, one wheel passing over his body, 7-year-old Andrew Ritrovato of 322 East Twenty-ninth Street, crawled from underneath the machine, regained his feet, and walked several steps toward the sidewalk. Then he fell unconscious. He is in Bellevue Hospital and is unlikely to recover.

The trial of Carl Fischer-Hansen, under indictment for extorting $15,000 from Joseph E. O'Brien of Philadelphia, was adjourned yesterday to May 21, a motion for dismissal of the indictment, made by counsel for the defendant, being still under Judge Rosalsky's consideration.

William L. Golden of 310 West Twentieth Street, who was struck by an automobile on March 30, at the Brooklyn Bridge entrance, died in St. Gregory's Hospital last night. Coroner Harburger ordered the rearrest of the chauffeur, Frank Wells.

Somebody rang up Police Headquarters last night on the 'phone and asked for Commissioner Bingham. Finding that he couldn't connect with that official he abused the operator, Lieut. O'Connor. This was repeated till a detective, sent to the place from which the man was telephoning, arrested him. In the Night Court he told Magistrate Wahle that he was Joseph Sullivan, steward of the Larry Mulligan Association. The Magistrate gave him five days in the workhouse.

BROOKLYN NEWS NOTES.

Mrs. Mary Bassett, 61 years old, was found dead in bed at her home, 313 Jefferson Avenue, yesterday. The gas had been turned on at two burners in the room. Mrs. Bassett had been ill for several months.

Barney Oldfield, the racing automobilist, was arraigned yesterday in the Flatbush Court, charged with violating the speed law on Ocean Parkway. His case was referred to the Court of Special Sessions.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company yesterday asked the Board of Estimate for a franchise to build and operate a loop on the surface around the triangle at the Atlantic Avenue terminus of the Subway. It is contended by the company that the opening of the Subway to Atlantic Avenue renders it unnecessary to operate trolley cars on certain lines to the Borough Hall.

JUDGES CONDEMN COLLUSIVE FAILURES

Highest New Jersey Court Says Trustees Named by Accused Director Must Be Removed.

PLAIN TALK IN TEST CASE

Alleged Building and Loan Association Jugglery Laid Bare and an Honest Liquidation Ordered.

The New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals has handed down a decision in connection with the winding up of the affairs of the State Mutual Building and Loan Association of New Jersey, which has an important bearing upon the liquidation of the affairs of corporations alleged or demonstrated to be insolvent. The court holds that trustees in liquidation cannot be allowed to continue in office if it is shown that they were concerned in acts of mismanagement to which the insolvency is due, or are appointees of the Directors chargeable with such mismanagement. In such case, the court holds, a receiver must be appointed who has had no previous connection with the corporation, and no affiliations with the management.

The matter of the New Jersey Building and Loan Association came up first on April 4, 1907, when Patrick Fitzgerald, a stockholder, filed a bill in chancery alleging insolvency, and seeking the appointment of a receiver. Fitzgerald made charges of mismanagement, whereupon the Directors controlling the vote of the majority shares adopted a resolution recommending its dissolution, and called a meeting of the stockholders at which this was indorsed.

Prior to this meeting the State Superintendent of Banks had filed a bill declaring the corporation insolvent and asking for the appointment of a receiver, but before a hearing could be had in the receivership matter, three trustees, appointees of the majority party, had been selected to liquidate the affairs of the association. The Vice Chancellor, before whom the matter came, refused to appoint a receiver, and left the three trustees in liquidation in power. Fitzgerald took an appeal on which the decision of the court of last resort is given.

The Court of Errors and Appeals, in an opinion by Judge James B. Dill, holds that the Vice Chancellor erred in leaving the corporation in the hands of three trustees who were the appointees of the Directors charged with wrecking it. The charges against the trustees were these, according to the affidavits supporting the Fitzgerald action:

> The three trustees selected by the committee were S. Stanger Izard, who is a Director and solicitor of the association; Benjamin Fowler, who is a particular friend of the President of the association, and Addison T. Mulford, who is the friend and nominee of Dr. Bassett, one of the Directors.
>
> Loans have been made by the defendant association to the National Park Association to the extent of several times the value of the property mortgaged, and as S. Stanger Izard is an officer and solicitor of this association, and whether or not he profited thereby, he cannot be expected to investigate or assist in locating the persons who made secret profits out of the transaction.

In his opinion Judge Dill says:

> Insolvency was demonstrated. But, more than this, there was made out a prima facie case of malfeasance on the part of officers and Directors. The inference was strong that the appointment of the trustees in liquidation was procured by the Directors and officers for the purpose covertly of maintaining the control, not only of the assets, but of the legal proceedings to which certain of the officers and Directors might be proper parties. The appointment of these trustees was a palpable attempt on the part of these officers and Directors to evade the consequences of the appointment of an independent receiver, whose duty it might be to bring them to the bar and hold them responsible for the failure of the company to the extent that they were properly chargeable therewith.

Accordingly Judge Dill held as a matter of law that it was repugnant to the settled judicial policy of the State to permit the continuance in control, directly or indirectly, of Directors and officers of a corporation against whom a case of malfeasance in office had been made out, or who appeared under the proofs to have been unfaithful to their trust as representatives of the shareholders, or to have used their positions to their own advantage and to the injury of the corporation. Judge Dill laid down the proposition that wherever the Directors or officers of a corporation, in the face of an application for the appointment of a receiver on grounds of insolvency alleged to have been caused by wrongdoing in office, undertake to liquidate, through the appointment of trustees of their own nomination, it is the duty of the court forthwith to remove the trustees and to appoint a receiver "who neither by his official participation in the affairs of the insolvent company nor by personal affiliation with the individual Directors will be embarrassed in the due administration of his office, which may include legal proceedings against these same officers and Directors."

HARVARD PROFESSOR SUED.

Miss Manley Asks Damages for Breach of Promise from P. B. Marcou.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 14.—The trial of the $30,000 suit brought by Miss Annie Manley against Prof. Philip B. Marcou, ex-Professor of Modern Languages at Harvard, alleging breach of promise, was begun before a jury in the Superior Court at East Cambridge to-day.

Miss Manley testified that from the time of their first meeting ten years ago Prof. Marcou saw her frequently. She had a stipulated allowance of $150 a month, she said.

She testified that the defendant had given her much valuable jewelry, including a set of earrings valued at $500, and six rings at from $50 to $200 each. She estimated the total value of the jewelry given her at $2,000.

On various occasions, the witness declared, Dr. Marcou had proposed to her and they had agreed to marry. Miss Manley said she received endearing letters from Prof. Marcou.

FIFTH AVENUE HOTEL WRECKERS ENJOINED

Knox, the Hatter, Stops Them from Knocking Dust in Customers' Eyes.

WON'T GET OUT TILL AUG. 1

Threats and a Crumbling Ceiling Have No Terrors for the Militant Merchant.

Edward M. Knox, the hatter, obtained an injunction yesterday against the Rheinfrank Housewrecking Company of 610 East Fourteenth Street, restraining the defendants from annoying him by interfering with his business at his store in the old Fifth Avenue Hotel building.

When the hotel was vacated the Hedley Construction Company gave the contract for demolishing the old building to the Rheinfrank Company, and the latter wanted the hatter to move out. Mr. Knox's lease does not expire until Aug. 1, and he expressed a firm determination to remain right there until midnight on July 31.

The wreckers did not try to persuade Mr. Knox to move before his time was up, but as a preliminary proceeding, he says, they knocked in the north end of his front window and the rain last Thursday night poured in and spoiled the goods that were exposed to view.

Then the wreckers, according to Mr. McKenna, manager of the store, started work on the floor overhead, which caused small pieces of the ceiling to come down in showers to the dismay of customers. The air was thick with lime dust, which is such a good friend to opticians.

Threats were made to Mr. McKenna that the wrecking company meant to erect a chute out to the sidewalk in front of the store to convey the débris down from the roof.

These proceedings roused the militant instinct of the proprietor, and he instructed his lawyers, Delaney & St. John of 2 Rector Street, to get an injunction against the firm, which came up yesterday in the Supreme Court before Justice Greenbaum, and was decided in favor of the hatter. Afterward Mr. Knox said:

"I pay $18,000 a year for that store, and I think a citizen ought to be protected from these big pirates in some way. May, June, and July are the three best months in the year for me, and it would soon have ruined my business to have my Fifth Avenue Hotel store filled with dust.

"I see that the Rheinfrank Company has built a bridge on the Twenty-third Street side of the hotel, and I can't see why the city authorities should allow them to do it, as it is not at all necessary. There is a passage clean through from Twenty-fourth to Twenty-third Street, and the débris could go out the back way."
